Understanding and supporting information seeking tasks across multiple sources
Amin, A.K.

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgement

Lynda, my wise professor, said a PhD student’s journey is similar to that of Frodo’s in Lord of the Rings. Sure enough, there have been many challenges faced and conquered during this journey. To say this thesis is solely a result of my personal expedition overstates the case. This work would not exist without the direct and indirect support of many people.

First on the list are the people with whom I worked. My PhD research could not have taken on the form that is has without the support of my supervisors: Lynda Hardman and Jacco van Ossenbruggen. Lynda and Jacco believed in this research even at times when I had doubts. I am in debt to Jacco for many technical insights and his pragmatic approach to finding solutions. Lynda kept me focused on my work when I started going astray. They kept me on track with my research. We did not always have the same ideas about the work, but the best thing about our three way collaboration was that one of them was always on my side if we had a difference in opinion. I will always remember the funny but accurate metaphors of Lynda and Jacco during our discussions, such as “Do research like the Dutch women’s volleyball team: just focus on having fun”, “Correcting a paper is like combing lice from one’s hair” or “We want you to go to the moon while you just want to cross the street”. Another fellow researcher with whom I interacted the most was Michiel Hildebrand. I could not have asked for a better partner for PhD research than Michiel. Many seemingly impossible ideas were made possible through his magical Prolog code. In social events, his endless energy at parties and his cooking skills are hard to match.

I am thankful to colleagues at CWI (Corrado, Henning, Theodora, Raphaël, Željko, Joost, Katya, André, Vera, Stefano, Lloyd, Frank, Steven, Michiel Kauw-A-Tjoe, George, Jop, Matthieu, Stefani and José) for all the juggling, salsa dancing, chocolate eating and other fun activities. I would also like to thank Hyowon Lee, a great designer, for many insightful discussions and his friendship. A special thanks to Junte Zhang whose hard work is reflected in Chapter 6 of this thesis, and Niels Nes and Arjen de Rijke who have been a great help on technical hardware issues especially during my last years.

The work presented in this thesis was funded by the E-Culture MultimediaN project. I would like to thank the past project team members (Borys, Lora, Bob, Jan, Anna, Victor, Mark, Laura, Zhisheng) for their cooperation and collaboration with me. I would like to thank Guus Schreiber, for giving user research a special place in a technology-driven project.

I am very fortunate to have worked with a group of very talented people at Google (Sian Townsend, Liviu Tancau and Terry Van Belle). It was a wonderful and empowering experience. I am also very happy to work with great and supportive colleagues at Elsevier. Thank you for making hard work fun.

I am grateful to Alan Smeaton, Diane Kelly, Arnold Smeulders, Vanessa Evers, and Bob Wielinga for serving as members of my PhD committee and for the feedback on my manuscript.

To my brother and sisters, thank you for supporting me with what I do. To my childhood friends and adopted family, Carolina, Nonnie, Jeany, Siska, Archi and Taniatje, I thank you for many years of laughter, for your friendship and for keeping me grounded. To Csaba, thank you for being patient with me, for understanding what is important to me, and for finding common and enjoyable paths for both of us to walk on.

Finally, the two people most responsible for who I am are my parents. Their biggest gift to me is the freedom to pursue the things I love doing. Terima kasih atas segala doa dan restu yang telah diberikan selama bertahun-tahun. Mama, this degree is yours too.