This book is the result of several years of hard and intensive work. During the years of my research I was simultaneously holding a full time job and a household. This research would have never been possible under these conditions without the support of several people and bodies who were a helping hand in this process. I would like to take this opportunity to thank those people who spent their time and shared their knowledge to help me complete my research with the best possible results.

First and foremost, I owe my deepest gratitude to my supervisors, Prof. Kees Hengeveld and Prof. Shlomo Berger, for their invaluable guidance and support. They provided me with the perfect conditions to perform my research under the limitations that I had. My discussions with them were excellent brainstorming for me and always a trigger for improvement. I was provided with complete academic freedom. I consider that a privilege. All this was a great research experience for me and I appreciate it so much. Thank you.

I also thank the Universiteit van Amsterdam and the Amsterdam Center for Language and Communication (ACLC) for providing me with office space and with pleasant and friendly working environment to perform my research during my stays in Amsterdam. I thank the ACLC for financially supporting the printing of this thesis.

I would like to thank Prof. J.B. den Besten, Prof. W.J.J. Honselaar, Prof. I.E. Zwiep (Universiteit van Amsterdam) and Prof. W.J. van Bekkum (Rijksuniversiteit Groningen) for accepting to be the members of my thesis committee and for reviewing my research. I thank Prof. J.B. den Besten for his very insightful comments.

I thank Prof. Shlomo Izre’el from the Department of Hebrew Culture in Tel Aviv University for his guidance when I was making my first steps in this research and for his permission to use pilot recordings from the Corpus of Spoken Israeli Hebrew (CoSIH) for this research. I would also like to thank all the subjects who provided me with the experimental data for their permission to use their materials. Special thanks go to Dr. Gideon Kidroni and Dr. Nomi Eshhar who provided me with excellent, high quality recordings of the language.

I am very grateful to Prof. Hezi Brosh from the Department of Languages in the United States Naval Academy (USNA) for always being available with excellent advice, both professional and administrative, even from distance.

I thank my colleague, Smadar Cohen, with whom I collected my corpus. Her partnership in the collection and analysis of the corpus as well as our professional discussions were of great help to me.

I thank the Dov Sadan Foundation of Hebrew Language, Hebrew Literature and Yiddish studies (Israel), the Ignatz Bubis Foundation of Jewish Studies (Germany) and Tel Aviv University (Israel) for their supporting research grants.

Much appreciation and many thanks go to Dr. Moshe Deutsch for his proofreading and editing of this thesis.

I am thankful to Mr. Oren Gedge and Dr. Felix Flomen, my superiors at NSC – Natural Speech Communication Ltd, for providing me with the flexibility that enabled my travels to Amsterdam.

I thank my family: my daughters, Tal and Rotem, and my spouse, David, for their understanding, support, patience and encouragement when it was most required. Special thanks go to Tal for her help in the transcription of my corpus.

I thank my parents, Niva and Jacob Eisenstadt, for having always stayed behind me and pushing me ahead during the years of my research. Special thanks go to my father for taking care that I have all the books I need and for making a great deal of administrative arrangements for me.

I am grateful to my sisters: Iris Rosenberg for her graphic consultation and for designing the cover of this book; and Tammy Gitnik for making so many of my arrangements and by that saving me so much time.
