Constructing mosques : the governance of Islam in France and the Netherlands

Maussen, M.J.M.

Citation for published version (APA):
Table of Contents

- Acknowledgements ................................................................. 11

CHAPTER 1. The governance of Islam and the construction of mosques in Western Europe .......................... 13
1.1. Introduction .............................................................................. 13
1.2. Islam and public policies in Western Europe: the state of research and theory ...................................... 16
1.3. A historically sensitive, institutional approach to the study of public policy discussions on Islamic presence and mosque creation ................................................................. 22
1.3.1. Policy-making and Islam: discourse and institutions .............................................................................. 22
1.3.2. Policy discussions and the role of institutions .......................................................................................... 26
1.3.3. Institutionalised regimes of government, public policy and social situations ........................................... 28
1.3.4. Institutional logics and path dependencies .............................................................................................. 32
1.3.5. Case-study approach and public discussions on mosque creation ......................................................... 35
1.4. Public policy responses and the creation of mosques in France and the Netherlands: a comparative case study ........................................................... 37

CHAPTER 2. The governance of religion in France and the Netherlands. Institutional arrangements, traditions and principles ......................................................... 43
2.1. Introduction .............................................................................. 43
2.2. Church-state relations in France: institutional repertoires and principles in their historical context ................. 43
2.3. Legal regulations concerning the financing of houses of worship ............................................................. 46
2.4. Church-state relations in the Netherlands: institutional repertoires and principles in their historical context .................................................................................. 48
2.5. Legal regulations concerning the financing of houses of worship ............................................................. 53
2.6. Conclusion .............................................................................. 55

CHAPTER 3. French colonialism, Islam and mosques ....................................................................................... 57
3.1. Introduction .............................................................................. 57
3.2. French colonialism and Islam in Africa ................................. 58
3.2.1. Governing Islam in Algeria (1830-1900): Cultes reconnus in a colonial context ................................. 59
3.2.2. Governing Islam in West Africa: Islam as a source of cultural progress .............................................. 61
3.2.3. The early 20th century: La Politique Musulmane and an “Islam fabriquée par nous” ......................... 61
3.2.4. Algeria: official Islam and priority of colonial imperatives over secularism ........................................ 62
 CHAPTER 6. Guest workers and Islam in the Netherlands ........................................ 121
6.1. Introduction ........................................................................................................... 121
6.2. Immigrant workers and Islam in the Netherlands ............................................. 121
6.3. Policy responses to the presence of Islam in the 1970s ........................................ 125
   6.3.1. Religious needs, immigrant mobilisation and policy responses ....................... 127
   6.3.2. National policy responses and subsidies for the creation of Islamic prayer spaces .... 129
6.4. The presence of Islam and local society: mosques in Rotterdam in the 1970s ............... 131
   6.4.1. A central Rotterdam mosque? ........................................................................... 133
6.5. Conclusion ............................................................................................................ 135

 CHAPTER 7. Citizenship, Islam and mosques in France ........................................ 137
7.1. Introduction ............................................................................................................ 137
7.2. Cathedral Mosques ............................................................................................... 137
   7.2.1. Mosques as a public issue in France in the 1980s and the need for a Cathedral Mosque in Marseilles .... 140
7.3. Algeria, the Paris Mosque and l’islam des jeunes ................................................... 150
7.4. Islam of France and the Islamic Religious and Cultural Centre of Marseilles ............... 154
   7.4.1. Mosque building on the political agenda in Marseilles: “Everybody agrees that there should be a mosque in Marseilles” .... 156
   7.4.2. Everybody agrees… on what? ............................................................................ 158
   7.4.3. Development of the project and leadership over the Muslim community ............. 162
   7.4.4 Disagreements about the character of the Islamic Cultural and Religious Centre of Marseilles: symbolical role and the functions of the cultural centre ............ 166
   7.4.5. The future of Islam in France and reframing divergences between Muslim factions in Marseilles ................. 172
7.5. Islam de proximité ................................................................................................. 176
   7.5.1. Reframing mosques ......................................................................................... 178
   7.5.2. Building mosques and municipal policy practices ......................................... 180
   7.5.3. Financing mosque building ............................................................................ 180
   7.5.4. Islam de proximité in Marseilles .................................................................... 183
   7.5.5. A Grand Mosque and a cultural centre after all .......................................... 185
7.6. Conclusion ............................................................................................................ 187

 CHAPTER 8. Citizenship, Islam and mosques in the Netherlands ......................... 189
8.1. Introduction ............................................................................................................ 189
8.2. Ethnic Minorities Policy and mosque creation in Rotterdam .............................. 191
   8.2.1. Integration policies and Islam in Rotterdam in the 1980s .............................. 193
   8.2.2. Mosque creation and Urban Renewal Policies in Rotterdam ....................... 199