The Gramscian moment

Thomas, P.D.

Citation for published version (APA):
The Gramscian Moment

Table of Contents

- Acknowledgments
- A Note on the Text
- 1. The moment of *Reading Capital
  - 1.1 ‘I can only think of Gramsci…’
  - 1.2 Reading Capital in its moment
  - 1.3 ‘The last great theoretical debate of Marxism’
    - 1.3.1 Althusserianism
    - 1.3.2 Gramscianism
  - 1.4 Marxist philosophy
    - 1.4.1 ‘A new philosophy of praxis’
    - 1.4.2 ‘A new practice of philosophy’
    - 1.4.3 Marxism and philosophy
  - 1.5 The Althusserian and Gramscian Moments
    - 1.5.1 Gramsci’s organic concepts
    - 1.5.2 An enduring encounter
    - 1.5.3 Marxist philosophy today
  - 1.6 Philosophy, hegemony and the State: ‘metaphysical event’ and ‘philosophical fact’
- 2. Antinomies of Antonio Gramsci?
  - 2.1 Incompletion and reconstruction
  - 2.2 A theoretical toolbox?
  - 2.3 ‘Antinomies of Antonio Gramsci’
  - 2.4 1+1=3
  - 2.5 Detours via detours
  - 2.6 The emergence of hegemony…
  - 2.7. …and its deformation
  - 2.8 Three versions of hegemony in the West
  - 2.9 Political society + civil society = State
  - 2.10 Shadows of Croce
  - 2.11 East and West, past and present
  - 2.12 Antinomies of the United Front
  - 2.13 The spectre of Kautsky
  - 2.14 A labyrinth within a labyrinth?
3. ‘A riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma’?
On the literary form of the Prison Notebooks

3.1 Traces of the past
   3.1.1 An arbitrary and mechanical hypostatisation of the moment of hegemony
   3.1.2 A strategy of detours
   3.1.3 State, integral State, political society
   3.1.4 Base and superstructure, superstructures and Ideologies

3.2 Code language
   3.2.1 A helmet of Hades?
   3.2.2 From ‘m.’ to the ‘philosophy of praxis’

3.3 Hieroglyphs
   3.3.1 ‘Für ewig’
   3.3.2 Three phases of work
      3.3.2.1 First phase
      3.3.2.2 Second phase
      3.3.2.3 Third phase

3.4 Incompletion: a work in progress
   3.4.1 Fragmentary philology
   3.4.2 An anti-philosophical novel

3.5 An unfinished dialogue
   3.5.1 The education of the educator
   3.5.2 Necessary incompletion

3.6 An Ariadne’s thread
   3.6.1 Preliminary philology
   3.6.2 Differential temporalities
   3.6.3 A modern classic

4. Contra the Passive Revolution

4.1 The ‘integral State’
4.2 The Long Nineteenth Century
4.3 The birth of civil society
4.4 Passive revolution
4.5 War of position
4.6 ‘War of position’ versus ‘war of movement’
4.7 Two phases of passive revolution
4.8 Duration versus historical epoch
4.9 Crisis of authority
4.10 Modernity as passive revolution?
5. Civil and Political Hegemony

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>5.1 Consent versus coercion</td>
<td>148</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.1.1 ‘Political leadership becomes an aspect of domination’</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.1.2 The ‘dual perspective’</td>
<td>152</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2 Civil society versus the State</td>
<td>154</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.1 Superstructural ‘levels’</td>
<td>156</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.2 ‘The concept of civil society as used in these notes…’</td>
<td>159</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.3 The State as the ‘truth’ of civil society</td>
<td>161</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.4 The ‘particularity’ of the integral State</td>
<td>165</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.5 Civil society as the ‘secret’ of the State</td>
<td>167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.6 Political society sive the State?</td>
<td>170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.7 Attributes of the integral State</td>
<td>174</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5.2.8 The ‘location’ of hegemony</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

6. ‘The realisation of hegemony’

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>6.1 West versus East</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.1 Predominance as weakness</td>
<td>181</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.2 The ‘underdeveloped’ West</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.3 The absent centre of the West</td>
<td>183</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.4 Antinomies of East and West</td>
<td>184</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.5 The international capitalist State form</td>
<td>192</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1.6 Differential temporalities of the State</td>
<td>196</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2 Hegemony, bourgeois and proletarian</td>
<td>199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.1 A generic theory of social power?</td>
<td>200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.2 The hegemonic apparatus: political power as immanent to class power</td>
<td>202</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.3 Which Lenin?</td>
<td>206</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.4 The realisation of hegemony</td>
<td>210</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.5 The NEP</td>
<td>212</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.6 Gramsci’s NEP</td>
<td>213</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.2.7 NEP - United Front – civil and political hegemony</td>
<td>215</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.3 Actuality of the United Front</td>
<td>217</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
7. ‘The philosophy of praxis is the absolute “historicism”’

7.1 ‘The absolute “historicism”’
   7.1.1 Theory of history and historiography
   7.1.2 The popular aspect of modern historicism

7.2 Two critiques: liquidation and dilution
   7.2.1 Gramsci contra Bukharin… and Diamat
   7.2.2 An Anti-Croce
   7.2.3 Post-Marxism avant la lettre
   7.2.4 History of freedom
   7.2.5 Reform or destruction of the dialectic?
   7.2.6 Croce’s absolute historicism
   7.2.7 Gramsci’s absolute historicism: a first approach
   7.2.8 Speculation
   7.2.9 Speculative philosophy as a moment of hegemony

7.3 Ideology sive philosophy
   7.3.1 The non-contemporaneity of the present
   7.3.2 The impossibility of an essential section
   7.3.3 Philosophy sive history sive politics
   7.3.4 The philosophy of praxis as the ‘catharsis’ of a determinate practical life

7.4 Towards a philosophy of praxis
   7.4.1 ‘The philosophy of praxis is praxis is “the absolute historicism”’
   7.4.2 Historical materialism
   7.4.3 ‘The so-called objectivity of the external world’

8. ‘The absolute secularisation and earthliness of thought’

8.1 Althusserian science
   8.1.2 Spectres of Bukharin
   8.1.3 The kernel of the philosophy of praxis
   8.1.4 Under the shadow of Croce
   8.1.5 ‘Also science is a superstructure’

8.2 Traces of immanence
   8.2.1 The Diesseitigkeit of absolute immanence: theory

8.3 Gramsci: linguist
   8.3.1 History, metaphor, hegemony
   8.3.2 Aufhebung as inheritance: supersession and assumption
   8.3.3 Nominalism versus philology
   8.3.4 ‘A completely autonomous and independent structure of thought’
   8.3.5 The subterranean current of philosophies of immanence

8.4 Why immanence?
   8.4.1 ‘Absolute immanence’
   8.4.2 The ‘transcendence’ of philosophies of immanence

8.5 Gramsci: economist
   8.5.1 ‘Speculative immanence and historical and realistic immanence’
   8.5.2 ‘Determinate market’
8.5.3 The ‘tendential laws’ of the ‘determinate market’:
the ‘philology’ of ‘relations of force’
p. 318
8.5.4 Three sources of Marxism or ‘historical process still in movement’?
Immanence as the ‘unitary synthetic moment’ of the philosophy of praxis
p. 322
8.6 Immanence = theory
p. 325
8.6.1 ‘Rendering practice more coherent’
p. 326
8.6.2 The merely ‘formal’ difference of coherence
p. 328
8.6.3 Logical coherence
p. 330
8.6.4 Coherence and the capacity to act
p. 331
8.6.5 Una persona coerente
p. 332
8.6.6 The incoherence of senso comune
p. 334
8.6.7 Platonic anti-Platonism
p. 335
8.7 The identity of theory and practice
p. 340

9. ‘An absolute humanism of history’
p. 344

9.1 The humanist controversy
p. 345
9.1.1 A return of the subject?
p. 347
9.1.2 The union of humanism and historicism
p. 348
9.1.3 An ‘ensemble of historically determined social relations’
p. 350
9.1.4 Subject or persona?
p. 354
9.1.5 The Gramscian person
p. 355
9.2 Humanism, hegemony and intellectuals
p. 361
9.2.1 Marxism and the intellectuals
p. 362
9.2.2 A sociology of the Italian intellectuals
p. 364
9.2.3 Intellectuals and the integral State
p. 367
9.2.4 Function of intellectuals
p. 369
9.3 Organic and traditional intellectuals
p. 371
9.3.1 A power mechanism for conforming new forces
p. 373
9.4 Renaissance humanism
p. 376
9.4.1 ‘Renaissance’ versus ‘Reformation’
p. 377
9.4.2 Neo-Humanism
p. 379
9.5 Philosophos sive politicus
p. 380
9.5.1 The democratic philosopher
p. 382
9.5.2 The democratic philosopher and senso comune
p. 384
9.5.3 The democratic philosopher as Aeolian harp
p. 386
9.5.4 The democratic philosopher as collectivity
p. 388
9.6 The ‘modern Prince’ and apparatus of proletarian hegemony as ‘philosophical fact’
p. 389

Bibliography
p. 392

English and Dutch Summaries
p. 412

Index
p. 426