Acknowledgements

First and foremost I would like to thank my supervisors, Peter Hoppenbrouwers and Guy Geltner. Without Peter's encouragement, patience and unwavering support this dissertation would never have been written. Guy's friendly and inspiring comments and support made working on my dissertation very enjoyable. I would also especially like to thank Rudi Künzel, who was so kind as to read my work and whose meticulous remarks were hugely insightful.

Teachers and colleagues at the Medieval History Department of the University of Amsterdam have always shown great loyalty and kindness. For many years, first as a student and later as a colleague, I have been tutored by Bert Demyttenaere, Peter van der Eerden, and Louk Meijer, whose courses in Latin first kindled my interest in the Middle Ages. My thanks to all the members of the Medieval History Department at the UvA, Mario Damen, Jinna Smit, Jan Burgers, Erik Goosmann and Frans Camphuijsen, and especially Maaike, who are equally responsible for the very friendly atmosphere at our department. Over the past three years I have also lectured at the Rijksuniversiteit Groningen, where the members of the History Department, Remi van Schaijk, Karl Heidecker, Job Weststraete, Babette Hellemans, Wessel Krul and Barbara Henkes and Catrien have also supported me immensely. I would also specifically like to thank the members of the library department at the UvA for their help, as well as the Landelijke Onderzoeksschool Mediëvistiek.

Many thanks to my friends Yeb Wiersma, Wanda Reisel, Wim Straver, Margriet van Heesch, Jannah Loontjens, Florence Tonk, Dic van Duin, Rob Schouten, Daniël Samkalden, Abel Nienhuis, Maaike Martens, André Klukhuhn, Tijs Goldschmidt, Mark Pieters and Hein van der Heijden; my sisters Hanneloes and Frederiek Weeda, Menno Steketee, Stefan Royé, my nephews and nieces Samuel and Esther, Stella and Titus, and Menno Wigman, as well as, especially, my two tall paranimphs, Theo Nijland and Ronald Biersteker, who have given me a second home in the Beemster fields, and lots of good food. Finally, I would like to thank my mother, Marja, and above all my father, who spent many hours proof reading, making bibliographies, and supporting me in every possible way. I would like to dedicate this study to him.
