This research project has been made possible by many different people and communities. I am deeply grateful to all of them.

First and foremost, I am greatly indebted to the many police officers whom I met and who will remain anonymous here. All of them generously shared their time, thoughts and feelings when I came along. Officers receive a great amount of scrutiny, which is an inherent part of the job. I will forever carry with me the incredible stories that you've shared and often wish I could relive it all again. I hope this study sheds light on what it means to use and deal with violence as a police officer. There are some officers who I would like to thank particularly, but for the sake of anonymity I will do this in person.

Second, my promotores. Don, thank you for asking me to apply in your project. I never imagined such an adventure was in the cards for me. You have opened up new worlds and allowed me to connect with my personal fascinations. Your curiosity, enthusiasm and belief helped me to feel confident, and your critical questions made me aware of my blind spots. I will continue to learn from that. Giseline, it was a privilege to learn from your expertise, wisdom and amusing outlooks on life. You advised me to stick with my ideas, encouraged me to speak up and to go into depth. Your ideas on theoretical contributions to the academic community and conceptual clarity have been incredibly insightful. This work would not have come into being without the both of you, thank you.

I am thankful that the members of my defence committee are willing to review and critically engage with my research. I feel humbled and honoured to present my work to you as renowned and esteemed scholars. I want to thank you for your time and effort as I realize how busy you are.

I was lucky enough to call the University of Amsterdam my academic home for many years. Thank you to Kobe, Gerben, Chip and Marci for supporting me in learning the craft of academic teaching. I learned a lot from all of you and found an inner passion. I want to thank everyone at the AISSR, especially Jeske and Gaby, for helping with the many practicalities that accompany PhD times. Zahra, thank you for supporting me with media related issues. Thank you also, in particular, members of the culture club program group for all the stimulating conversations we had. Thank you Christian and Patrick for reviewing my work. Thank you Thijs Bol for supporting my career building attempts. And thank you Marie for helping me to reflect on future plans.

Thank you to Holly Campeau, Sandra Bucerius and Kevin Haggerty for making my research stay at the Centre for Criminological Research University of Alberta possible and incredibly inspiring. Although I went home with bear-fright, I learned a lot about academic work, the international community and cocktails.

On a daily basis I enjoyed working along brilliant and fun colleagues who I have learned a lot from, thank you, in particular, Anastasiya, Anna, Charlotte, Christoph, David, Dragana, Josien, Laila, Michiel, Myra, Pinar, Rens, Sander, Yannis. Fenna, thank you for helping me think through ideas and practicalities, I often think about your calmness. Minke thank you for making me laugh a lot and know that I admire your stamina and your work. Laura, thank you for your nuanced views, helping me to reflect on difficult issues and being my money buddy. In this final year you have been an invaluable source of comfort, fun and knowledge. To many more laumibo's.

I am privileged and happy to have worked with the greatest team of all. Thank you to my colleagues in the group-violence project: Phie, Floris and Rozalie. We have been through tough times together, helped lift each other up, and found good ways to forget about our sorrows.

To my friends and former colleagues: Angelique, Bernadette, Henry, Judith, Jules, Mel, Nick, Nina, Pijke, Sanne, Taher, Urs, Wouter thank you for listening to all my stories and worries. Lotte, Suzy, Juul and Sandra you have made my study time unforgettable. Lot and Juul, you have helped me to challenge my insecurities and taught me to be proud of my academic achievements. Our drinks and dances have helped me through many worrying times. I am forever grateful that I have such good friends who cheer me on so enthusiastically.

To my Indonesian family: Edu (Eagle Eddy), Inge (Joansy), Joey and Stephanie, thank you for helping me stay grounded and to keep eating well.

Mom, thank you for believing in my abilities and never doubting them. You are always so convinced of what I can achieve. Sharing small successes and failures was always the highlight of my day. I am thankful for your faith in me.

Andy, dankjewel dat je mijn broertje bent. Ik hoop dat je trots bent.

Thank you to Helena (a.k.a. Boeboe, baby Yoda, Snuggles, Devil and many more nicknames) for all your cuddles and kisses when I was feeling down.

Finally, to Jeremy and my father to whom I am indebted so much for their help and love.

Jeremy, my absolute rock, my criticaster, my support, my love, my annoyance, my down to earth man, you were always there to help. I could not have done this without you. A list of things you have helped me with would always remain unfinished. I am forever grateful for your help, your love, your food and endless encouragement. This dissertation is part you. Thank you.

Hey papa, look at me now! All those Kijk magazines must have helped right? Your enthusiasm, interest in science (albeit not necessarily social), laughter and patience in hearing me out encouraged me to keep going. Thank you for being there for me. I hope I have made you proud. Dit is voor jou.
