For the love of experience: changing the experience economy discourse

Snel, J.M.C.

Citation for published version (APA):
Contents

Figures

Figure 1.1 – Progression of Value (Pine and Gilmore, 1999, p.72) .................................................. 25
Figure 1.2 – The objectivistic perspective within the three approaches of experience .............................. 30
Figure 1.3 – Research model according to Verschuren and Doorewaard (1998) .................................... 35
Figure 1.4 – Research outline ............................................................................................................. 36

Figure 2.1 – Three processes that are part of dematerialization ............................................................ 47
Figure 2.2 – Dematerialization of economic offerings (after Pine & Gilmore, 1999) ............................... 48
Figure 2.3 – Environment-centred definitions of experience, with distinction between core and conditions .......................................................... 60
Figure 2.4 – Effect-centred definitions of experience, with distinction between core and conditions...62
Figure 2.5 – Encounter-centred definitions of experience, with distinction between core and conditions ............................................................................................................................. 64

Figure 2.6 – Three components of the definition of experience.................................................................. 65
Figure 2.7 – Aspects of experiences in a broader context of dematerialization ......................................... 66
Figure 2.8 – Scale of market entities (Shostack, 1977, p. 77) ................................................................. 70
Figure 2.9 – Goods–Services–Experience Continuum (O’Sullivan & Spangler, 1998, p. 19) ............... 71
Figure 2.10 – The weight of objective features versus subjective responses in consumption experiences (Addis and Holbrook, 2001, p. 58) .................................................................................. 83
Figure 2.11 – The emotion process (based on Desmet and Hekkert model of product emotions (Desmet et. al., 2001)) ..................................................................................................................... 86
Figure 2.12 – The activity dimension .................................................................................................... 90
Figure 2.13 – Continuums of interactivity (Shedroff, 1994) ................................................................. 91
Figure 2.14 – The experience realms (Pine & Gilmore, 1999, p.30)..................................................... 95
Figure 2.15 – Levels of intensity with which insideness and outsideness are experienced (based on Relph, 1976, pp. 50-55) .................................................................................................................. 96
Figure 2.16 – Change in value exchanges between organization and individual ..................................... 103

Figure 3.1 – Vicarious experiences are an in-between type of experiences, between primary and secondary experiences. ................................................................................................................ 120
Figure 3.2 – Primary experience versus mediated vicarious experience .......................... 124
Figure 3.3 – Observational vicarious experiences ....................................................... 126
Figure 3.4 – Simulated and immersive vicarious experience ....................................... 128
Figure 3.5 – Tree diagram of varieties of vicarious experience ................................. 130
Figure 3.6 – Experiential Learning Cycle (Kolb, 1984) ........................................... 139
Figure 3.7 – The temporal difference between an Erlebnis and an Erfahrung ............ 145
Figure 3.8 – Differences in impact between meaningful and integrative experiences... 149
Figure 3.9 – The spectrum of experience-concepts .................................................... 151

Figure 4.1 – Convergent and Divergent problems after Laurel’s Flying Wedge (1993) ... 182
Figure 4.2 – Spectrum of experience concepts related to surface and deep approaches to learning... 190
Figure 4.3 – The Self-Determination Continuum showing types of motivation with their regulatory styles and perceived loci of causality (Ryan & Deci, 2000, p.72) ........................................... 192
Figure 4.4 – Locus of causality for different concepts of experience ............................ 195

Figure 5.1 – Customer Value Equation (Heskett et al, 1997, p.40) ............................... 203
Figure 5.2 – Expectations of SEC-characteristics in different phases of the consumption process. 211
Figure 5.3 – Rivalry/Excludability matrix .................................................................. 213
Figure 5.4 – Dematerialization causes a shift towards non-rivalry ............................... 215
Figure 5.5 – Forces working for and against excludability ........................................ 216
Figure 5.6 – Change in commerce because of growing role of individuals ................. 220
Figure 5.7 – Virtuous cycle of human capital (after Ratchford’s (2001) theory of Human Capital) ............................................................................................................................ 224
Figure 5.8 – Focus on non-rivalry because of non-practical nature of experience-interests... 232
Figure 5.9 – Modes of Encounter (based on Seamon, 1979) ....................................... 237
Figure 5.10 – Connection between first role for organizations and conceptualizations of experience ......................................................................................................................... 245
Figure 5.11 – Connection between second role for organizations and conceptualizations of experience ......................................................................................................................... 247
Figure 5.12 – Connection between third role for organizations and conceptualizations of experience ......................................................................................................................... 248
Figure 7.1 – Main and subthemes emerged from interviews..................................................... 275
Figure 7.2 – Engagement and subthemes .............................................................................. 277
Figure 7.3 – Elements of subtheme ‘Talking about it’ ............................................................ 278
Figure 7.4 – Elements of subtheme ‘Relation vs. calculation’............................................... 283
Figure 7.5 – Elements of subtheme ‘Being pulled by your feathers’....................................... 289
Figure 7.6 – Elements of subtheme ‘Knitted cloth’ .................................................................. 294
Figure 7.7 – Lessons to be learned in relation to Engagement............................................... 304
Figure 7.8 – Direction and subthemes .................................................................................. 307
Figure 7.9 – Elements of subtheme ‘Not getting on that bus’.................................................. 308
Figure 7.10 – Elements of subtheme ‘The image of the sower’................................................. 314
Figure 7.11 – Elements of subtheme ‘Here’s a bike and go’................................................... 320
Figure 7.12 – Elements of subtheme ‘What movie you’re in’.................................................. 325
Figure 7.13 – Lessons to be learned in relation to Direction.................................................. 335
Figure 7.14 – Investment and subthemes .............................................................................. 338
Figure 7.15 – Elements of subtheme ‘Knowledge from out of the wall’............................... 340
Figure 7.16 – Elements of subtheme ‘Pressure cooker’.......................................................... 346
Figure 7.17 – Elements of subtheme ‘Climbing frame’............................................................ 351
Figure 7.18 – Elements of subtheme ‘New oxygen’................................................................. 354
Figure 7.19 – Lessons to be learned in relation to Investment............................................... 359