Contents

Chapter 1	General introduction	1
1.1	Reading fluency development	1
1.2	Reading-related processes and reading difficulties	3
1.3	Heterogeneity of dyslexia	4
1.4	Variability in orthographic processing	6
1.5	Themes and outline of this thesis	7
Chapter 2	Predicting word reading fluency in Dutch children in a longitudinal study: The role of phonology and orthography	11
2.1	Introduction	12
2.1.1	The role of orthographic processing in word identification	13
2.1.2	The role of orthographic processing in spelling ability	14
2.1.3	The need to control for phoneme awareness and rapid serial naming as independent predictors	15
2.2	The present study	17
2.2.1	Considerations of how to operationalize the theoretical concepts	19
2.3	Method	21
2.3.1	Participants	21
2.3.2	Phoneme awareness	22
2.3.3	Rapid serial naming	23
2.3.4	Orthographic processing	23
2.3.5	Reading and spelling measures in Dutch	24
2.3.6	Vocabulary	25
2.3.7	Procedure	25
2.3.8	Analyses	25
2.4	Results	27
2.4.1	Word reading fluency	28
2.4.2	Pseudoword reading fluency	29
2.4.3	Spelling ability	32
2.5	Discussion	33

Chapter 3	Dutch dyslexic adolescents: Phonological-core variable-orthographic differences	41
3.1	Introduction	42
3.1.1	Universality of phonological processing	42
3.1.2	Orthographic competence as an additional independent predictor	44
3.1.3	Universality of the phonological deficit	46
3.1.4	Variability in orthographic competence	47
3.1.5	Orthographic competence in spelling	49
3.2	Research questions	50
3.3	Study design	50
3.4	Method	52
3.4.1	Participants	52
3.4.2	Selection variables	54
3.4.3	Control measures	54
3.4.4	Phonological processing	55
3.4.5	Orthographic competence	56
3.4.6	Reading and spelling measures in Dutch	57
3.4.7	Reading and spelling measures in English	58
3.4.8	Procedure	59
3.4.9	Analyses	59
3.5	Results	60
3.5.1	Descriptive statistics	60
3.5.2	Hierarchical regression analyses	61
3.5.3	Individual differences	63
3.5.4	Phonological processing	65
3.5.5	Reading and spelling measures in Dutch and English	67
3.5.6	Questionnaire	69
3.6	Discussion	70
Chapter 4	Dutch dyslexia in adulthood: Core features and variety	77
4.1	Phonological core deficits across orthographies and age	78
4.2	Variability in orthographic coding	79
4.3	The present study	82
4.4	Research questions	83

4.5	Method	85
4.5.1	Participants	85
4.5.2	Phonological coding	86
4.5.3	Orthographic coding	86
4.5.4	Reading measures in Dutch	87
4.5.5	Reading measures in L2 English	88
4.5.6	Control measures	89
4.5.7	Procedure	90
4.6	Results	90
4.6.1	Comparisons between dyslexic adults and normal adult readers	90
4.6.2	Comparisons between dyslexic adults and younger reading-age controls	91
4.6.3	Hierarchical regression analysis	92
4.6.4	Individual differences	93
4.6.5	Phonological coding	96
4.6.6	Reading in Dutch and English	97
4.6.7	Cross-script comparisons	99
4.6.8	Ruling out alternative accounts for ORTH+'s advantages	99
4.6.9	Questionnaire findings	100
4.7	Discussion	102

Chapter 5	Cognitive profiles of poor readers compared to typical readers in middle childhood, early and late adolescence, and adulthood	107
5.1	Introduction	108
5.1.1	Reading-related processes and reading development	109
5.2	The present study	112
5.3	Method	115
5.3.1	Participants	115
5.3.2	Measures	118
5.3.3	Analyses	120
5.4	Results	121
5.4.1	Comparisons between poor and typical readers	121
5.4.2	Comparisons between the age-groups	121
5.4.3	Multiple case studies	124
5.5	Discussion	126
5.5.1	Methodological aspects	129
5.5.2	Heterogeneity	132

Chapter 6	General discussion	135
	6.1 Review of main findings	135
	6.1.1 Orthographic processing as an important predictor	135
	6.1.2 Universality of phonological processing deficit	136
	6.1.3 Heterogeneity among dyslexics	137
	6.2 Who is dyslexic?	139
	6.3 Orthographic processing	140
	6.3.1 Orthographic processing in relation to other reading-related processes	144
	6.4 Persistent problems	147
	6.4.1 Remediation	148
	6.5 Heterogeneity	150
