Foreword

It has been a marvellous experience to meet so many individuals over the past five years who were interested in and contributed to this research each in their own way. It would have never been possible to come this far without their support.

First and foremost, I want to thank my promotor, Prof. Jan Kabel, for entrusting me with this project, for his guidance, for our challenging and inspiring discussions and above all for his ever positive spirit. I could not have wished for a better promotor.

Likewise, I am very grateful to Dr. Lucie Guibault, my daily supervisor. She gave me her full professional support and encouraged me on many occasions. Despite her busy schedule she always allowed me to drop by unannounced and she listened patiently to me when I tried to give form to often unripe ideas.

I want to thank the directors of the Institute for Information Law (IViR) Prof. Bernt Hugenholtz, Dr. Mireille van Eechoud and Prof. Nico van Eijk, for their trust. I am also very grateful to my colleagues Stef van Gompel, Joris van Hoboken, Natali Helberger, Esther Jassen, Aswin van Rooijen, Christina Angelopoulos, Melanie Dulong de Rosnay, Tarlach McGonagle and everyone else whom I met and shared discussions, lunches and drinks with over the past five years. Some say academic work is a form of solitary labour in an ivory tower. However, to me the IViR presented a fruitful mix of excellent academic expertise and practical wisdom. I worked there amidst a team of friendly, supportive and open-minded individuals.

Further, I need to mention my colleagues from the Academische Club: Geranne Lautenbach, Laurens Dragstra, Thomas Beukers, Herman van Harten, Ceciel Rayer, and David Moskovicz. The discussions of each other’s chapters, papers and ideas were immensely valuable and enjoyable. At our monthly meetings, I often found the support and renewed spirit that I needed to continue my research.

My very special thankfulness belongs to Christoph Jeloschek, who has been a truly great friend and sparring partner. Despite having become a busy attorney and father of a charming little boy, Christoph volunteered to read all chapters of this book and suggested countless improvements. Besides, Christoph also knew when to pick up the telephone and to ask if things were going all right. As this project now seems finally finished, I hope that we will find time in our ever busier lives to pursue our shared passion - kite surfing on the shores of the Netherlands.

Equally, I am thankful to my brothers and parents as well as to the great Abraham family, the family of my wife. They always supported me with their advice and their love. It is a special joy to spend time together during our summer and winter retreats at our beautiful Wörschachhauses 1&179&128 in the Austrian Alps. With them and at that place lies the anchor of my life.
Finally, there is one person to whom I am indebted the most, my wife and friend Roswitha Abraham-Sakulin. The patience and support that she showed over these past years and her trust in my professional capability have made an invaluable contribution to this project. I admire her, now even more than before, for her energetic and artistic spirit and for her wisdom in convincing me to pursue the ‘real life’ next to my research. Walking together on the pilgrim path to Santiago de Compostela, looking for, and buying a beautiful apartment and organising our wonderful wedding at the marvellous castle of Strechau in September 2009 was certainly the best encouragement to finalise this book.
