Acknowledgements

It's taken a little longer to get here than expected. On the way I have been lucky enough to have encountered many wonderful and interesting people. First and foremost I want to thank my supervisors, Arthur Schram en Joep Sonnemans, for teaching me the ways of an experimental economic academic, for their ideas and feedback and of course their patience. CREED is just about the best environment to start working on your PhD-thesis. It attracts so many inspiring people: Adrian, Aljaz, Arno, Astrid, Ernesto, Eva, Ferdinand, Frans, Gijs, Jens, Karin, Matthijs, Michal, Nick, Peter, Stefan and Theo. I especially want to thank Jos Theelen for programming the software for the experiments described in chapters 2 and 3. The experiment in chapter 4 is the result of the time I spent in Canterbury. There too I was able to work (and socialize) with many fine people: Amrish, Brian, Edward and especially Mark van Vugt. Of course, there is a life outside the walls of the university as well. Many thanks to my colleagues of Radio Mortale – Casper, Erik, Ernst, Gert, Jasper, Maarten, Sander, Tom, Wim, Yannick, Yoast – for giving me the opportunity to pretend I was the next John Peel every week for an hour and Eelco, Esther, Freek, Gerrit, Koen, Martijn, Merit, Michelle, Suncica and Tonie for hanging out and drinking a beer or two after seeing some obscure band at the OCCII, Nieuwe Anita, upstairs at the Paradiso or elsewhere. Not forgetting Lisette and Maya of course. Finally, I wouldn't have made it here without my family. My brother Thomas but most importantly my parents, André Gillet and Ellen Sijm. I probably haven't shown nearly enough how grateful I am for their seemingly endless support and encouragement.
