Acknowledgements

Many people have made the writing of this thesis an exciting and inspiring endeavor. I would like to express my sincere gratitude to them and I hope that these acknowledgments are not incomplete. First of all, I owe special debt to my supervisors Marc de Wilde and Will Kymlicka and to my co-supervisor Roland Pierik. Marc, I am grateful for your mentoring and continuous support. In addition, thank you for the comprehensive discussions and criticisms of a number of drafts that have greatly improved my arguments. Will, my extended visits to Queen's University and your unfailing support have contributed invaluable to the creation of this work. Roland, thank you for giving me the opportunity to write this dissertation based on your research proposal, stimulating feedback and opening many academic doors for me. It has been a privilege working with all three of you. I would also like to thank Peter Rijpkema for offering me a PhD position at the Paul Scholten Center. Second, I would like to sincerely thank the members of the doctoral committee Rainer Bauböck, Han Entzinger, Betty de Hart, Ernst Hirsch Ballin, Yolande Jansen and Dorien Pessers for taking the time to read and assess my work.

In addition to the University of Amsterdam, two other institutions provided me an inspiring environment for conducting this research. I would like to thank the Department of Philosophy at Queen's University (Kingston) and the Center for the Study of Democratic Citizenship at McGill University. In this context, I also want to extend my gratitude to my host at McGill, Dietlind Stolle, for her supervision and encouragement.

During the years of my research I also benefited from discussions with many academics working on related issues and experts in the field. I want to thank, in no specific order, Betty de Hart, Ernst Hirsch Ballin, Bas Schotel, Ricky van Oers, Jeremy Bierbach, Dora Kostakopoulou, Roswitha Weiler, Jan van den Oord, Renée Frissen, Randall Hansen, Joseph Carens, Audrey Macklin, Arash Abizadeh, Antoine Bilodeau, Tineke Strik, Fatima Kilic, Anna Korteweg, Miles Hewstone, Paul Scheffer, Erna Lensink, Jonathan Wolff, Robin Celikates, Natasha Basu, Gijs van Donselaar, Han Entzinger, Dorien Pessers, Iris van Domselaar, Rob Schwitters, François Levrau, Nanda Oudejans, Marcel Maussen, Jeremy Bierbach, Ali Agayev and Martijn Stronks. I also presented my work at a number of conferences, workshops and seminars. It would be impossible to list and thank all organizers and participants here. However, special mention must be made of Ivo Wallimann-Helder, Fabian Schuppert and Carina Fourie for providing me a forum to discuss my work at the workshop ‘Respect, Recognition and Social-Relational Equality’ at the Center for Ethics at the University of Zurich.

My colleagues and students at the University of Amsterdam also deserve my gratitude. Especially, I want to thank my fellow PhD candidates Yedan Li, Hadassa Noorda, Nina Holvast, Vigilenca Abazi, Michelle Parlevliet, Nienke van der Have, Anne van Mulligen, Nik de Boer and Laura Burgers. Thanks to Wieke Kremer and Alfons Hooikaas for typesetting and formatting this dissertation and designing its cover and to Shailoh Phillips for the excellent English language editing.

Finally, I want to thank my family and friends, here and abroad, for the assistance and periodic relief they provided. My greatest debt is to my parents, for always unconditionally supporting me in any way that a person can be supported, and Ali, for his ongoing encouragement, love and care.
