Acknowledgements

When I began work on this dissertation, it took me a long time to find an advisor who responded to my request to complete this project in Europe while living in Australia, and who was willing to take me on with a loose idea of working on modernist images of the violin. I am immensely grateful to Gregor Langfeld who not only agreed to take on the supervision of my project, but provided guidance in narrowing my topic, and then remained the supervisor of every doctoral candidate's dream, with prompt and insightful responses to my emails and questions. It made my work on this project so much easier, despite the geographical distance, and helped me stay motivated even after the birth of my baby boy towards the end of my candidature.

I would like to extend my gratitude to my second supervisor, Julia Kursell, who provided me with endless ideas and directions when it came to musicology, and who allowed me to become part of a lively musicology seminar group, which remained a useful sound board and testing ground for my chapters throughout my candidature.

Thank you to my husband Ian has spent countless hours listening to me voice my thought processes, brainstorm ideas, and express my doubts and questions. He has been my rock, my encourager, my support, and my sound board, and often the first audience for any fresh ideas I might have. No one else has endured more conversations about Cubist art, Braque, or violins, and no one has supported me more whole-heartedly and selflessly than him.

Finally, I am indebted to and humbled by Georges Braque, whose work I have been studying for the last four years, and who has sparked many ideas for my academic and curatorial endeavours. This enigmatic artist has proved to be a surprise and a treasure at every turn of my research journey. I am thrilled to share how special this artist is with my readers, and I hope my dissertation will increase awareness of his art and his immense contribution to modernism and to Cubism among the public.
