The making of Dutch flower culture: Auctions, networks, and aesthetics
Gebhardt, A.C.

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgments

Many people helped in a variety of ways in completing this thesis; I hope anyone I fail to mention will pardon my forgetfulness.

First and foremost I want to thank my parents for supporting me in many ways throughout this often challenging process. Their love and kindness were essential every step of the way.

I’m very grateful to Alex Strating for his advice and insight; he was with me at the beginning of my Ph.D trajectory and stayed through to the end. Frances Gouda provided encouragement, advice, intellectual rigor, and a sympathetic ear through many rewrites and reconceptualizations of this project. I feel fortunate to have worked with her. Mattijs van der Port was there as well at crucial stages— at the very beginning and at the very end, with kind intelligence, vital critical feedback, and writerly insight.

Without my informants, this work could never have been done. Too many people to list by name helped me in ways large and small throughout my research. They offered their time, invited me into their homes, gave me tours of their greenhouses and places of work, entertained my questions, showed patience, and provided me with insight and understanding. I felt welcomed in the horticultural world thanks to them, and feel lucky to have met such thoughtful and generous individuals.

Thanks also to my colleagues at the UvA, including members of the anthropology club, who commented on early drafts of these chapters.

Above all I want to say gracias to friends and loved ones. Anouk de Koning and Eileen Moyer offered terrific insights and intellectual rigor at vital stages, as well as friendship, encouragement, solidarity, and patience throughout the experience. I cherish their presence and their comments as readers. Clara Cendrós Torres Montserrat was supportive especially during chapter 5, accompanying me on fieldwork in Ethiopia, and contributing beautiful photos. Florencia Kral was there from beginning to end with insight, good humor, and camaraderie. Ana Menendez, Miriyam Aouragh, Ajay Gandhi, and Kelly Brady read drafts of various parts of the thesis and gave valuable feedback. I feel fortunate as well for the friendship of Randy Bundel, Beth Bedinotti, and Victoria van den Doel. Finally, I’m deeply grateful for the companionship and warmth of Kranya Díaz-Serrano.