This book would not have been possible without the help of various people. In the first place I thank my supervisors Richard van Leeuwen and Gerard Wiegers for their valuable comments throughout all stages of the writing process.

Various people have assisted me in locating rare documents in different places around the world. This is particularly true for Özcan Geçer in Istanbul. He drew my attention to many valuable Turkish sources that I would not have found otherwise. Without his information, this book would have taken a different form. I thank Peter Verkinderen at the Netherlands-Flemish Institute in Cairo for locating and copying a number of publications in the National Library in Cairo. Frank Daudeij has searched the archives of the Los Angeles Times. Anja Vyborova at the Netherlands Institute Saint-Petersburg secured for me copies of a rare pamphlet in Russia. I also thank Eugene Sensenig-Dabbous, Guita Hourani, Ammeke Kateman, Abdul Sheriff, and Maaike Voorhoeve for their enquiries in different libraries around the world.

Other people have given me valuable information. I thank Ami Ayalon for information about Rizq Allāh Ḥassūn, Stefan Reichmuth for information about Şābūnji’s Dīwān, and John Zubrzycki for information about Alexander Malcolm Jacob. I thank my colleagues of the Arabic department, Mona Hegazy, Caroline Roset, Robbert Woltering, and Liesbeth Zack, for their input on complex Arabic passages. I also thank Gunay Uslu, Birkan Calik, and Jan Schmidt for their help with Turkish texts.

The period that I have spent researching and writing this book has been very pleasant thanks to my colleagues in PCH337, Baukje van den Berg, Mônica Colominas Aparicio, Ron Gruijters, Jo Heirman, Niels Koopman, and Paul van Uum. The heated discussions about a wide variety of (non-) issues, the habitual follies, and the overall atmosphere made my workplace a stimulating environment.

I would like to thank my parents for their continuing support and concerns. I also thank Sandra, who has supported me the most during the entire process and particularly during the last stages. Finally, I thank Sije for sleeping diligently, when I was making the final changes to the manuscript during the evening hours.
