Alfrid K. Bustanov,
Ph.D., TAIF* Professor of the history of Islamic peoples of Russia at European University in St. Petersburg, a librarian at the Oriental sector of the Branch of Manuscripts and Rear Books of the Scientific Library of Kazan’ Federal University (Kazan’, Russia). E-mail: alf_b@list.ru

‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm’s Biographical Dictionary on Siberian Islamic Scholars*

Summary: This article is a publication of facsimiles and annotated English translations of two versions of a biographical dictionary of Siberian Islamic scholars. The work written by ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm deserves serious attention from scholars because it opens up a world of intellectual life among the Muslims in Western Siberia almost unknown so far. The sources provides us information on local scholars who lived between the 18th and late 19th centuries, their interests, education, networks and theological debates. All of this allows us to claim that an elaborated Islamic discourse existed at that time in Siberia.

Key words: ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm, biographies of Islamic scholars, Islamic discourse, Islam in Siberia, Islam in Russia, Siberian Tatars, the Tatar manuscript culture, Riḍā al-Dīn b. Fakhr al-Dīn.

The heterogeneous milieu of the pre-revolutionary Islamic elite in Western Siberia, biographies of scholars, their writings on different topics, their inter-regional networks and their role in establishing local religious institutions are poorly known in modern scholarship. The goal of this article is to publish two previously unknown texts which shed new light on the intellectual life of Muslim communities in Siberia between the late eighteenth and early twentieth century. My argument here is that an elaborate Islamic discourse existed in the region which was strongly interconnected with the legal and theological debates idiosyncratic to the Volga-Ural region, Central Asia, and Daghestan.

* | I would like to thank James Pickett (Princeton University) for reading a draft of my article. This research has been supported by the Russian State Foundation for Humanities (РГНФ, project no. 13–31–01011) and the Russian Foundation for Fundamental Research (РФФИ, project no. 13–06–97069p_поволжье_а).
Two texts analyzed in the present article are in fact drafts of the same work written by the famous traveler ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm (1857–1944) and entitled Sibiriyada zaman sabaqta wa hazırdə bulunmuş ‘ulamalar (Siberian Scholars in Past and Present). In what follows I will offer a short description of the work and a discussion of its contents.

Description of the manuscripts

This particular biographical dictionary of Siberian Islamic scholars survived in two copies. Both of them originate from the archive of the prominent Tatar scholar Riḍā al-Dīn b. Fakhr al-Dīn (1859–1936). Since the late nineteenth century Riḍā al-Dīn had been collecting historical sources on famous and prominent Islamic figures of the Russian Empire and later published two volumes of his biographical dictionary Athār (the third and fourth volumes remained in the manuscript form and were published only recently [12]). Riḍā al-Dīn disseminated letters to prominent intellectuals of his time requesting memoirs, biographical accounts, and other narratives on local Islamic history. These collected texts underwent a critical selection and linguistic modification, which means that not all of the collected sources were published in Athār in their entirety and their language was ‘corrected’ in accordance with Riḍā al-Dīn’s understanding of the Tatar literary language. Fortunately, many original texts sent to Riḍā al-Dīn b. Fakhr al-Dīn survived in his private archive, two parts of which today are located in St. Petersburg and Ufa.

The earlier copy of the biographical dictionary is preserved at the Scientific Archive of Ufa in the Scientific Centre of the Russian Academy of Sciences [1]. The copy is bound with other manuscripts in a huge volume (560 folios). Late 19th century Russian paper was used. Two separate pagination are visible on the folios: one done by Ibrāhīm and another by Fakhr al-Dīn. Black ink is used; the style of handwriting is ta‘liq and belongs to the hand of ʿAbd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm. The number of lines on each page varies significantly. The earlier copy bears only two comments by Riḍā al-Dīn, one of which clarifies that “the notes on these ten pages belong to the pen of ʿAbd ar-Rashīd qāḍī Ibrāhīm” [1, f. 17b].

The second and larger copy of ʿAbd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm’s biographical dictionary is stored at the Archive of the Orientalists of the Institute of Oriental Manuscripts of the Russian Academy of Sciences (St. Petersburg) [2]. The manuscript appears to be a small notebook with the Russian pagination made by pen at the archive. The number of lines varies greatly. Much free space was left between the blocks of text devoted to individual scholars so that the author could add new information. The text is written in black pen, the style of handwriting is ta‘liq and belongs to the hand of ʿAbd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm. The Russian paper is dated to the late 19th century. The left bottom part of page 5a bears a stamp reading “Uspenskoi fabriki №6”. In front of many biographical blocks Riḍā ad-Dīn b. Fakhr ad-Dīn wrote the word yazıldı, meaning written, i.e. used for his own work in Athār. Sometimes he also shortly commented on the text [2, f. 8b–9a]. Most probably this version of the dictionary was finished in 1894–95 because there are no later dates in the text.
The language of both versions is Ottoman Turkic with some Tatar elements. These manuscripts reflect different stages of writing, with some sections remaining unfinished. There is a significant overlapping in both copies, but some important details remained specific to each separate work. Therefore I have rejected the idea of constructing a ‘critical text’ and prefer to publish both versions separately.

Islamic Discourse in Western Siberia

It is certain that ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm meant this collection of biographies as a separate work because it has a title, clear structure with a section on history of Imams in Tara, a list of rural Mulas of the past and present as well as biographies of rich philanthropists who were also well-versed in Islamic sciences. With regard to the structure, it is noteworthy that in the St Petersburg manuscript Ibrāhīm offers the names of Imams in each village that he knows of, trying to also specify the full names and even nick-names of the local intellectuals. Moreover, in conformance with the classical Arabic genre of pious biographies (tabaqāt), the author introduces his entries with the formulae “and among them” (“wa minhum”).

The author’s style is rather uneven: next to quite small sections on important scholars whom ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm would have known personally or at least by reputation, he writes long anecdotes which tell us very little about intellectual life in the region. Generally, Ibrāhīm’s attitude towards his compatriots was rather denigrating: he acknowledged the prominent scholars of the past, but in his eyes very few such exemplary intellectuals were still alive in his day.

Ibrāhīm’s sensibilities notwithstanding, between the late eighteenth and early twentieth centuries there was a stable circle of Islamic scholars in Siberia who expressed their views on various religious topics. The legacy of legal debates among the Siberian ‘ulama has only just started to be explored, but from already known manuscripts one can clearly understand that Islamic discourse in Siberia was strongly bound with the trends and discussions common throughout the Volga-Ural region, Dagestan and Central Asia. From Ibrāhīm’s dictionary and from some other manuscripts we learn that the fifth daily prayer has always been an issue for local Muslims. Some of the Siberian scholars, namely Muḥammad Niyyāz b. Ḥaydar (Aitikin) [1, f. 15; 2, f. 14b], Shaykh Muḥammad b. Şālib [1, ff. 16–17] and Şabanchi b. Yār Muḥammad [1, f. 14; 2, ff. 11a–12a] presented a legal recommendation (fatwa) from the Madinan Mufti ‘Abd al-Raḥmān al-Sirāğ (d. 1836), in which it was claimed that the fifth prayer should be performed even in the northern lands where days were short [2, f. 11b]2. But the final point in the debate was made only after the local scholars got acquainted with the works of ‘Abd al-Nasīr al-Quršāwī (1776–1812) [3, p. 272–307; 4; 5], the Volga-Ural scholar who made the decisive argument that concluded the debate. Another example deals with the precise calculation of the Islamic calendar and with the associated discipline of astronomy. As a result of debates on the astronomical calculations in the city of Tara, the local scholar Dawlat Bāqī b. ‘Alī Aṣğār (d. 1840) went to Bukhara in order to improve his knowledge of these sciences. By some miracle the astrolabe, which belonged to Dawlat Bāqī and is described in our manuscripts in detail, found its way to local museum in the city of Tobol’sk and still remains there [1, f. 11; 2, f. 3a, see figure 3 attached to this article]3. Other notable legal debates prominent in neighboring regions are curiously absent in Ibrāhīm’s dictionary. For example, he does not mention the discourse on the vocal and silent forms of Sufi litanies (adḵār), engaged major ritual activity and controversy among local Sufis4, because ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm does not really distinguish between Sufis and those without Sufi affiliation, though he does mention that this or that person was “an Ishan” with no further details offered. From other biographical sources with overlapping coverage we can observe Sufis who served prominent roles in local villages, such as Khwājām Būrdi Ishān (d. 1855) from the village of Sāwusqān. This is likely also a result of the fact that in the 1890s, when he compiled his dictionary, Ibrāhīm simply was not involved in this network and therefore fully omitted Sufi aspects of religious life in Siberia.

---

2 | The text of that fatwa survived in a collection of spiritual chains and legal documents from Sayid Vakh-idi’s (1887–1938) collection and is preserved at the Institute of Oriental Manuscripts (St Petersburg), MS B2695, ff. 1b–13a.

Among the important details Ibrāhīm did offer were descriptions of private libraries and rare books. For instance, Ibrāhīm lists “an old” copy of Iḥyāʾ ‘ulūm al-dīn by al-Ghazālī which was preserved first in the hands of Fayḍ Allāh b. ‘Alī Aṣğār and then moved to the Qarīmṣaqūf library [1, f. 12; 2, f. 3a]. In all likelihood this masterpiece is now lost. Almost every mentioned scholar had a personal library, but unfortunately very few remnants out of these collections are known us today.

Who is a Scholar?

For ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm, Muslim scholars were required to play a central role in the life of Islamic community and were responsible for its development [9, pp. 281, 284]. How did he define those intellectuals whom he included in the dictionary?

While compiling a list of scholars and gathering information about them from oral and some documentary sources, Ibrāhīm did not cover every person who ever studied at religious schools, wrote something, or collected a library, but wrote only about the persons about whom he managed to gather sufficient information in a short period of time. Some important people are not mentioned at all because their active involvement in the social life started a bit later. For example, the poet Māwliḵāq b. Yūnābād (1834–1910) from the village of Yānhāy and the Imam Ḥujjat al-Ḥakīm b. Dawid from the village of Aubātqān both published quite a lot of works in Kazan’ and Orenburg in the 1910s, but neither was included in Ibrāhīm’s biographical dictionary.

3 | This passage had been analyzed in our article: [6].
4 | See the documents and their analysis in my monograph: [7, pp. 77–83, 88–100].
5 | See a letter of Muʿtāṣim b. Bilāl, a local Imam, to Rūḍa al-Dīn b. Fakhr al-Dīn, dated from 1895 [8, f. 111b]. This letter was written as addenda to Ibrāhīm’s dictionary.
Ḥujjat al-Ḥakīm b. Dawūd closely cooperated with Ibrāhīm, who published the former’s articles in his journal Bayān al-ḥāq. Surprisingly, Ibrāhīm also fails to provide us with detailed accounts of several scholars with whom he was personally familiar or about whom he knew a great deal. For example, he writes only a short paragraph about Raḥmat Allāh al-Yāngūrāzī (1824–1887), a teacher and Imam of the Tārā mosque, whom Ibrāhīm replaced after Raḥmat Allāh moved to Petropavlovsk.

Even more surprising are very brief notions on Ni’mat Allāh Qarīmsaqūf (1829–1901), a merchant from the village of Yānbāy who supported the local scholarship and established a rich library [2, f. 2a; 7, p. 39–43]. One can only speculate that as far as both survived versions of the dictionary were still the work-in-progress, Ibrāhīm planned to include Qarīmsaqūf as well, while his attitude towards al-Yāngūrāzī might have been rather ambivalent: the latter became an enemy of the Aytikins trading family, who actively supported Ibrāhīm at the early stages of his career.

Interestingly, Ibrāhīm distinguishes individuals according to their origin: whether they are the representatives of local tribes (Ayālī and Qurtāq are among mentioned), or members of Central Asian migrants (some of them being descendants of saints with the titles of Khwāja, Shaykh and Sayyīd), or settlers from the Volga-Ural region. Symptomatically, while including Mulas and merchants under the same notion of ‘ulama, Ibrāhīm says nothing about descent groups connected to the particular grave of a saint, who are often represented by Russian ethnographers as ‘local spiritual authorities’ and ‘elite groups’ [10]. One might reply that this omission reflects a clear distinction between more or less official Islamic institutions (mosques, schools, and Sufi lodges) and ‘underground’, unofficial Islam represented by descent groups at the sacred places.

Two points should be clarified here. First, ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm and scholarly circles more generally did not regard shrine keepers as a similarly privileged class: in the eyes of the ‘ulama, the academic credentials of the shrine keeping profession were unimpressive. Learned society united only those who distinguished themselves due to their scientific talents, ‘seeking of knowledge’ (ṭālib al-‘ilm), and long-term study of classical books at the knees of established scholars. Second, the fact that absolutely no sacred place was mentioned by Ibrāhīm suggests that between the eighteenth and early twentieth centuries the veneration of shrines did not play a central role in the religious life of Siberian Muslim communities. Significantly, there is also no discussion about the legitimization of sacred places in the framework of Islamic law; this phenomenon is totally absent in our sources. My hypothesis is that the Soviet transformations of Islamic communities and disappearance of highly educated elite lead to the growing significance of local descent groups and sacred places which became the only spots of communal and individual worship while mosques were closed down. In the context of religious revival in the late 1980s up to the present day, believers employed the mass media and anthropological publications to put sacred places at the core of local Islamic identity and even reconceptualised them in national terms, quite in the Soviet fashion [7, pp. 63–77].

---

6 | For further information see: [7, pp. 23, 40, 150].
7 | For a detailed account on this person: [7, pp. 21–39 (plus facsimile of his work in the appendix)].
It seems that in the 1890s ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm still had a quite romantic understanding of how the real Islamic scholar should comport himself and hence his long anecdotes about scholars and merchants sometimes helps us understand the spirit of that time better. When describing the fate of each scholar, Ibrāhīm offers information on the individual’s lifespan, places of birth, education, travel, and death. ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm also mentions the qualities of scholar’s heirs, often complaining that they were “insignificant” or rather “unfortunate”.

These characteristics mean that as a source on individual biographies Ibrāhīm’s dictionary is not comprehensive. In fact it constitutes a rather sketchy description of Islam in Siberia, though valuable and unique in its own right. Siberian Scholars in Past and Present is an introduction to the Islamic history of Western Siberia, which maps the geography of Siberian Muslim identity, provides a list of main personalities and illustrates the networks of scholars and their debates on religious issues.

In February 2008 and March-April 2009 I had the auspicious opportunity to have a close look at Rıldāl-Dīn’s archive in St. Petersburg and to refine my observations during a joint trip with Igor’ V. Belich to Ufa in November 2008. It is my pleasure to thank our colleagues at the Section of Manuscripts and Documents of the Institute of Oriental Manuscripts (St. Petersburg) as well as Dr. Marsil’ Farkhshatov (Ufa) for providing me with the high resolution copies that are published here.

Facsimile
به‌خصوص گزارش کردن آن‌ها، نمی‌توانم پاسخ مناسبی بدهم. بنابراین، با خداوند گفتگو کنید و تجویز‌های او را دنبال کنید.
مهم‌ترین مرز کاه‌کننده‌ی ارباب، بودن بنا را لازم ندارد. رنگ‌دانی می‌کند، فرم‌گیری می‌کند. یک لیست مواجهه‌کننده برای این بود که با چه افرادی مواجهه‌ای نمی‌کند. یک لیست مواجهه‌کننده برای این بود که با چه افرادی مواجهه‌ای نمی‌کند. یک لیست مواجهه‌کننده برای این بود که با چه افرادی مواجهه‌ای نمی‌کند. یک لیست مواجهه‌کننده برای این بود که با چه افرادی مواجهه‌ای نمی‌کند. یک لیست مواجهه‌کننده برای این بود که با چه افرادی مواجهه‌ای نمی‌کند. یک لیست مواجهه‌کننده برای این بود که با چه افرادی مواجهه‌ای نمی‌کند. یک لیست مواجهه‌کننده برای این بود که با چه افرادی مواجهه‌ای نمی‌کند.
بدرود.

آبراهیم حسنی در زمینه‌های مختلفی به خدمت است. از جمله این زمینه‌ها می‌توان به زبان‌شناسی و تاریخ نگاری اشاره کرد. او در آینده نزدیک، به پژوهش‌های خود پرداخته و در زمینه‌های مختلفی به خدمت است. از جمله این زمینه‌ها می‌توان به زبان‌شناسی و تاریخ نگاری اشاره کرد.

البته، چون این مقاله به زبان فارسی می‌باشد و به منظور بهبود زبان فارسی می‌باشد، برای بررسی دقیق‌تر این مطلب نیازمند بررسی و ترجمه به زبان انگلیسی می‌باشد.

در نهایت، می‌توان گفت که آبراهیم حسنی در زمینه‌های مختلفی به خدمت است. از جمله این زمینه‌ها می‌توان به زبان‌شناسی و تاریخ نگاری اشاره کرد. به مطالعه و تحقیق در این زمینه‌ها در آینده نزدیک، به پژوهش‌های خود پرداخته و در زمینه‌های مختلفی به خدمت است. از جمله این زمینه‌ها می‌توان به زبان‌شناسی و تاریخ نگاری اشاره کرد.

در نهایت، می‌توان گفت که آبراهیم حسنی در زمینه‌های مختلفی به خدمت است. از جمله این زمینه‌ها می‌توان به زبان‌شناسی و تاریخ نگاری اشاره کرد. به مطالعه و تحقیق در این زمینه‌ها در آینده نزدیک، به پژوهش‌های خود پرداخته و در زمینه‌های مختلفی به خدمت است. از جمله این زمینه‌ها می‌توان به زبان‌شناسی و تاریخ نگاری اشاره کرد.

در نهایت، می‌توان گفت که آبراهیم حسنی در زمینه‌های مختلفی به خدمت است. از جمله این زمینه‌ها می‌توان به زبان‌شناسی و تاریخ نگاری اشاره کرد. به مطالعه و تحقیق در این زمینه‌ها در آینده نزدیک، به پژوهش‌های خود پرداخته و در زمینه‌های مختلفی به خدمت است. از جمله این زمینه‌ها می‌توان به زبان‌شناسی و تاریخ نگاری اشاره کرد.
سال ۱۳۹۳ خورشیدی

مطهر علی ملکی

شماره پاسپورت: ۱۴۳۸۰۱۰۱/۱۴۳۸۰۱۰۱

شماره مجازی: ۱۴۳۸۰۱۰۱/۱۴۳۸۰۱۰۱

دفتر کار: مطب دکتر مالکی

مکان: تهران

تاریخ: ۱۳۹۳/۰۱/۰۱

مقدمه

در سن پارسیان ایران، مکتب علمی به بهترین شکلی به دانشگاه تهران فراهم شده است. این دانشگاه، به دلیل زیراکت، پایداری و پیشرفت، یکی از بزرگ‌ترین دانشگاه‌های کشور است.

به‌طوری‌که باعث می‌شود، مطالعه علمی و تحقیقات در این دانشگاه بسیار فعال باشد. همچنین، دانشجویان در این دانشگاه، می‌توانند به بهترین شکلی، از فرصت‌ها و منابع آموزشی بهره‌مند شوند.

واضح است که، تحقیقات و پژوهش‌های علمی در ایران در حال رشد و پیشرفت است. چون این دانشگاه، یکی از سبزه‌های علمی در ایران است، می‌تواند به عنوان یک مثال برای دیگر دانشگاه‌ها باشد.

در این مقاله، می‌خواهد به‌طور کلی، از همه پاسخگویی کنیم که، می‌تواند به عنوان یک مثال برای دیگر دانشگاه‌ها باشد.

به‌طور کلی، این دانشگاه، به دلیل پیشرفت و تحقیقات علمی، یکی از بزرگ‌ترین دانشگاه‌های کشور است.

مقدمه

در سن پارسیان ایران، مکتب علمی به بهترین شکلی به دانشگاه تهران فراهم شده است. این دانشگاه، به دلیل زیراکت، پایداری و پیشرفت، یکی از بزرگ‌ترین دانشگاه‌های کشور است.

به‌طوری‌که باعث می‌شود، مطالعه علمی و تحقیقات در این دانشگاه بسیار فعال باشد. همچنین، دانشجویان در این دانشگاه، می‌توانند به بهترین شکلی، از فرصت‌ها و منابع آموزشی بهره‌مند شوند.

واضح است که، تحقیقات و پژوهش‌های علمی در ایران در حال رشد و پیشرفت است. چون این دانشگاه، یکی از سبزه‌های علمی در ایران است، می‌تواند به عنوان یک مثال برای دیگر دانشگاه‌ها باشد.

در این مقاله، می‌خواهد به‌طور کلی، از همه پاسخگویی کنیم که، می‌تواند به عنوان یک مثال برای دیگر دانشگاه‌ها باشد.

به‌طور کلی، این دانشگاه، به دلیل پیشرفت و تحقیقات علمی، یکی از بزرگ‌ترین دانشگاه‌های کشور است.
کتاب ایبیل با سفارش بیش از هر چیز دیگری به کار گرفته شده است. مدتی نگه‌داری می‌کنید یا به‌طور کامل استفاده می‌کنید؟

هر چه‌ی که از آن‌ها برای هر چیزی استفاده شده است، این بخش از کتاب در جلد نگه‌داری می‌شود.

در این جلد، مبنایی برای ساختن یک حساب ادبی و یا کتاب‌های دیگر ارائه می‌شود. در نهایت، به‌طور کلی، این جلد می‌تواند به عنوان یک جلد اصلی در سایر جلد‌ها بکار رود.

با سپاس از شما، درک‌ده‌نده‌ای که حاضر به ارائه نسخه بیشتری از این جلد می‌باشد. این جلد می‌تواند به عنوان یک جلد اصلی در سایر جلد‌ها بکار رود.
آلفريد ک. بستانو

‘عبد الرضوان بیرحم من وقایع زندگی تاریخ اسلامی سیبری...’

صفحه 15
Alfrid K. Bustanov | ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm’s Biographical Dictionary on Siberian Islamic...

This person was famous for his brightness. After performing pilgrimage to Mecca the Honorable in 1866, he met Raḥmat Allāh efendi, one of the famous Indian scholars, and in front of him he carefully read [Raḥmat Allāh’s] treatise entitled Azhār al-Hāq. ['Abd al-Aḥad’s] efforts in dissemination [of this work] were not successful until he met students suitable for this job. He had put much effort in everyday lessons, guiding students, and hence ['Abd al-Aḥad] produced good followers. Many of these students came from Cheliabinsk, Shadrinsk and Ekaterinburg provinces, one of them also from Siberia. [Among his students] we know by names and places of origin more than two hundred Imams and up to twenty five teachers. But they did not live long and therefore could not bring [their learning] to public.

['Abd al-Aḥad] taught the following subjects: morphology, syntax, Talkhīṣ, Isāgūjī in addition to Nu’mān Shamsiyya and the text of ‘Agāid ma’a Khayālī; Mukhtaṣar Hidāya, Tawḍīḥ ma’a Taḥwīl from the juridical sciences, Qādī Baydāwī from commentaries [on the Qur’an]. There were no other subjects [taught]. All of these books were copied by ['Abd al-Aḥad’s] father Ḥaḍrat ‘Abd al-Naṣr, who continued writing until the end of his days. His copy of ‘Ināya was made when 'Abd al-Naṣr was 93 years old. He used to write in the moon light. In dark nights he wrote with a lamp (chirāgh). Since there were no candles, he used put a bowl with water under the lamp and shook off the top of the wick by his pen to water. I know about this from [a note at] the end of his book. /9/ His handwriting was extremely beautiful. It was similar to the ḥadīth style. ‘Abd an-Naṣr Ḥaḍrat studied with Daghestani scholars. His son 'Abd al-Aḥad obtained his education in Machkara, but did not finish his studies and returned to his father. He reported that he learned most of the [Islamic] sciences from his father. At that time ['Abd al-Aḥad] was widely known. In the last years of his life he travelled several times to Siberia, where he left a good impression of himself. In 1866 he was fired [from his post of Imam] because he officially registered a marriage of his brother Ḥamīd with an underage girl. When in 1867–68 he was suggested for a position of a licensed (ukaznyī) Imam, he rejected it and continued to give lessons and perform duties of Imam without any license. Even though a parallel Mulla (iptāsh mullasis) Tuḥfat Allāh Anwārūf was jealous, he did not pretend to take ‘Abd al-Aḥad’s position or claim against him, but tried to imitate him. The deceased ‘Abd al-Aḥad Ḥaḍrat gave his perfect lessons until the last years and he passed away to the mercy of Allah in 1879, when he was sixty five. He was buried in the village of Alman.

‘Abd al-Aḥad did not have sons. Even though there were many daughters, when ‘Abd al-Aḥad was alive he did not give them his books, because they still were kids. The majority of these books moved to Shihāb al-Dīn b. Husām al-Dīn, the son of his brother and an assistant Imam. Even though the deceased Shihāb al-Dīn was well-educated, he did not use them, and the books remained untouched up to now. There were very precious books among them. Most of them were manuscripts\(^9\). May God’s mercy be upon him!

---

8 | This section was fully included in Athar. Cf.: [11, pp. 176–177, 349–350; 12, pp. 112, 549].

\(/10/\) Among the students of deceased [‘Abd al-Aḥad] we know the following residents of the Tumān district: Jalāl al-Dīn b. Zayn Allāh from village Muḥammadāyr, ‘Īzz al-Dīn b. Mullaš from Yānbāy village, Faṭḥ Allāh Mulla from the same village, Ḭalālah Mulla ‘Usmānūf from Yangī village, his predecessor Sayf Allāh Mulla; in Yaluṭor district: ‘Awwaṣ Bāqī Mulla from Tārkhan village, ‘Abd al-Bāqī Mulla in Iskī village; in Kāinskī district: Ḥalālah Mulla ‘Usmanūf from Yangī village, his predecessor Sayf Allāh Mulla; in Tara region there were very good students, but all of them did not live long. None of them gave lessons.

\(/11/\)

Some of the Famous Siberian Scholars

Dawlat Bāqī b. Ḥalālah Mulla ‘Asgār\(^10\) lived in the village of Ubā known as Bīrnāsh. For several years he performed the duties of Imam in the city of Tara. In the early 1800 he started his education in Bukhara the Noble. The reason of his return from Bukhara was that once he saw in his dream a girl named Zulfiya, a daughter of someone from the mentioned village, and fell in love with her. He confessed in his love, saying that he had seen her in a dream. After he spent two or three years working as an Imam, Dawlat Bāqī participated in some debates about a crescent moon (hilāl). He was defeated by his opponents because of his lack of knowledge in astronomy (‘ilm nuğūm) and astrolabe. In order to learn these sciences he went to Bukhara again. He obtained very good knowledge during these studies, but on the way back he died.

After his death, astronomical instruments and related to these sciences books were sent back to his family by inhabitants of the village where he was buried. After all, since there were no [direct] heirs in his family, the books went to the hands of Niyyāz Aytikīn. One of the Niyyāz Ḥājjī’s children, Naṣr ad-Dīn b. Niyyāz transferred a portative astrolabe of the aforesaid Mulla to a museum in Tobol’sk. In size this instrument was like a bottom of a round cup. On the surface of this and some other instruments a blessed verse was placed: “His Thrown comprises the Heavens and Earth”\(^11\). It was impossible to read and understand his books, because they were composed of different sorts of tables, numbers, and inscriptions. Nowadays one of his books is in hands of Naṣr ad-Dīn b. Niyyāz.

\(/12/\) Fayḍ Allāh b. ‘Alī Aṣgār\(^12\). This person taught in the Tara madrasa. He was a wise and distinguished person. One of his students, Mahdī Seydūkūf, became his successor (khalīfa). Even though Fayḍ Allāh Mulla was prominent [as a scholar], he was not perfect in teaching due to physical weakness. His elderly son, who is still alive has in his possession wonderful books. His name is ‘Abd Allāh b. Fayḍ Allāh, he destroyed the majority of ‘useless books’ and did not keep them.

---

9 | A 16\(^{th}\) century copy of the Qur’an from ‘Abd al-Aḥad’s library found its way to the collection of the Kazan’ Federal University. See: [13].
10 | Cf.: [11, p.176].
11 | Qur’an, 2: 255.
12 | Cf.: [14, pp. 53–54].
In accordance with his intention, the deceased [Fayd Allāh] went to Hajj. On the way there he [died and] was buried in Odessa. Some of his books were sent back to home. [The copy of] Ḥiyāa ‘ulūm al-dīn is now in the library of Ni’mat Allāh b. Qārimshāq Seydūkof’s brothers in the village Yānbāy called otherwise Mānchīl in the Tumān region. The Bukharan manuscript [of Ḥiyāa’] had absolutely no diacritics. The deceased [Fayd Allāh] was very much attached to this book. Besides of this copy, the [Seydūkof] library has two or three other books [from Fayd Allāh’s collection] which I placed there after I bought them from the heirs of Mahdī Seydīkūf. ‘Abd al-Rashīd b. ‘Umar.

Ibrāhīm b. ‘Abd al-Rashīd b. Ibrāhīm b. ‘Abd al-Raḥīm. This person was the father of our father and he gave a name to our family. He was famous both for being an Imam in Tara and for his wealth. Ibrāhīm was also known for his modesty and piety (ittiqa‘) and even excelled his own father in piety. His son-in-law told me that once, after he organized Muslims to cover the roof of a stone mosque with iron, he painted it himself in green. /13/ In 1829 at the end of his life [Ibrāhīm] left twelve thousand Rubles in cash for boys and six thousand for girls and went to Hajj. In [18]31 on the way back from Hajj together with his friends Ibrāhīm and his son Muḥammad died in Beirut. I have [an exemplar] of Jāmi’ al-Rumūz copied by him. May God bless them!

In 1794 Ibrāhīm’s father ‘Abd al-Rashīd b. Ibrāhīm b. ‘Abd al-Raḥīm together with rich merchants of that time built a stone mosque in Tara. That mosque is still there. I did not find somebody who knows his biography. Though he is known under the title of akhūn, I did not find any official written evidences. I have heard only stories about his generosity and wealth. This person died in the early 1800 and was buried in the village of Sayid located in fifteen verst from Tara.

/14/ A person famous as Būṭik Ishan lived in the region of Tobol’sk. I do not know the name of his father. He was a wise and distinguished person. During the short nights he did not perform the fifth prayer (‘ishā’ namazī). Damullā Sabanchī b. [Yār Muḥammad] did his best to make him perform the prayer of ‘ishā’ during the short nights. [Sabanchī] brought him treatises of all the famous scholars of that time, and even when he went to Mecca the Honorable, he obtained there a treatise by ‘Abd al-Raḥman Sirāj. However, when Būṭik Ishan read all of these treatises, he refused them. Eventually Sabanchī b. [Yār Muḥammad] brought a treatise by ‘Abd al-Naṣr

13 | This biographical entry was used by Murād al-Ramzi in his Talfiq al-akhbār wa talqīḥ al-āthār fi waqā‘i Qazān wa Bulqār wa mulāk al-Tatār [15].
14 | In his other work ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm wrote the following about the building of the Tara mosque: “In 1790 ‘Abd al-Rashīd akhun went to the Ibrīt market, [where he] collected money for building a mosque in Tara. (...) In 1793 (sic!) Sayyid Baba from the Ayali [tribe] and ‘Abd ar-Rashīd akhun from the Bukharans built the present day stone mosque. After the death of ‘Abd al-Rashīd akhun his son Ibrāhīm Bay became an administrator (mutavelli) of the mosque. This person was my grandfather; our current last name was first given to him. Ibrāhīm Bay was a famous merchant and took the mosque and madrasa affairs on his own. Even though he was busy with trade, he taught the Mathnawi to the madrasa students. Ibrāhīm, Mulla of the Uba village, told me that he studied the verses of the Mathnawi with Ibrāhīm Bay at the Tara mosque in 1823.” [16, p. 11]. Cf. information provided in Ibrāhīm’s diary: [28, pp. 72–74, 171–172].
15 | “Khwajam Īrādī b. Suyūnch Bāqī was a Sufi master (murshid) in the village Sawusqān close to the Siberian city of Tobol’sk and died in 1273 (=1856/57). His teacher Abu ‘Abd Allāh ‘Abd al-Qādir b. Niyyāz Aḥmad al-Fārūqī died in 1271 (=1854/55)” [29, p. 25].
al-Qūrṣāwī. After reading this treatise, Būtīk Ishan accepted it with great respect and honor, and [henceforth] made the performance of the ‘ishā’ prayer a rule for himself. When he progressed with reading ‘Abd al-Naṣr Qūrṣāwī’s treatise, he was impressed by [the author’s] skills in Islamic law (usūl-i fiqh). Būtīk died around 1833.

/15/

The Famous Merchants of Siberia

In the early 1800s there was a very famous adherent to the Sunna, a pious friend of scholarship Ḥājjī Niyyāz b. Ḥaydar16. Among his contemporaries this person stood out for his courage. Being involved in the leather production, he became an owner of a big factory. He paid great attention to the improvement of a mosque and a madrasa [in Tara]. Ḥājjī Niyyāz mastered Qur’anic sciences (‘ilm Qur’an). Between prayers of ‘asr and maghrib and between maghrib and ‘ishā’ Ḥājjī Niyyāz studied the recitation of Qur’an (qirā’a). This person learned the science of recitation with Egyptian scholars in Cairo as well as at home with local scholars. He used to spend a lot of money to support intellectuals. Because of his great love of scholars, he made a donation (waqf) of 30 thousand Rubles in cash for sustenance of local scholars. In the document (waqf-nāma) he said that even if his children would like to have money back, it was impossible. Besides his generosity Ḥājjī Niyyāz was known for bravery. In the city of Tara all Russian merchants and authorities were under his feet. He even dared to send off the head of the city. They put pressure on one of his Russian servants (prikashchik), Loskutov, in his own home. The latter died there and they called his son, gave him 5 thousand rubles in cash so that he could take his father’s corpse and bury it. They also fired another officer (ispravnik), [because he] announced that the Aitikin family does not possess rights on their lands17. [Niyyāz’s] lastname was Aitikin, [because] his father was nicknamed ‘Aituka’.

/16/ Ḥājjī Niyyāz left four sons and five daughters. All of his daughters inherited 70 thousand Rubles in cash (baqir hisabta) each. In 185218 he was buried in a village Sabalak which is in 20 km from Tara, may God’s mercy be upon him. His children at that time were regarded among the richest people, because of their rank19.

Muḥammad Shikhūf was one of the Siberian merchants. Perhaps, this person was even richer than the deceased Ḥājjī Niyyāz. Their houses stood in front of each other. Whatever Ḥājjī Niyyāz did, this person tried to imitate. He was very arrogant. Following Ḥājjī Niyyāz, he donated ten thousand Rubles to the mosques’ benefit. However, in the documents (waqf-nāma) he wrote that “in case my descendants will be need, they are free to get money back”. After his death and big troubles, his heirs returned that money and spent them. The majority of his descendants and

16 | Cf.: [14, pp. 33–35].
17 | About the Aitikins’ huge landownership see: [17].
18 | Here addition in the margins by Riḍā al-Dīn b. Fakhr al-Dīn: “In the later works [he wrote that it happened] later.”
19 | On sources of their legitimacy see: [18]. A photographic portrait of the family see in figure 2 attached to this article.
descendants of their descendants became stained and miserable and died in great need. Nowadays one of his daughters Laṭīfa is working as a lawyer. Another daughter Marthiya nicely lives with her only son in a village of Birnash. This son became a good man: Ṭāšbūlāṭ b. ‘Abd an-Nasr Kniazev serves in big committees (komissiia). The deceased Muḥammadī Ḥājjī died when he was fifty years old. He was buried in a village of Sabālak. A stone construction on his grave was sold by his son ‘Abd al-Ḥay to Rogachev, a Russian.

Genealogy which goes back to the descendants of hazrat ‘Ali, be God’s mercy upon him, was in the hands of Muḥammadī Ḥājjī20. /17/ Abd al-Jabbār b. Muḥammadī wanted to approve its authenticity in St. Petersburg, but he did not succeed in obtaining the duke status and soon died. This ‘Abd al-Jabbar Ḥājjī was a wonderful person, but he died too early in his thirty three. Much of his work remained unfinished, may God bless him21.

20 | The genealogy of the Shikhovs family is known in several variants; my article on their historical significance is forthcoming.
21 | A comment by Rīdā ad-Dīn b. Fakhr ad-Dīn: “These ten pages belong to the pen of ‘Abd al-Rashīd qāḍī”.
لا يمكنني قراءة النص العربي من الصورة المقدمة. يرجى تقديم نص يمكنني قراءته بشكل طبيعي.
مهمتی که من در اینجا باید انجام دهم در مورد نگاهی به شرایط واقعی این سختی‌ها بوده است.

برای دریافت اطلاعات بیشتر، می‌توانید به من بپرسید.

خواهش می‌کنم، اطلاعاتی که در این جا ارائه می‌شود، به طور کامل و دقیق باشد.

برای دریافت اطلاعات بیشتر، می‌توانید به من بپرسید.
Alfrid K. Bustanov | ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm’s Biographical Dictionary on Siberian Islamic...
لا يوجد نص طبيعي يمكن قراءته بشكل طبيعي من الصورة المقدمة.
Alfrid K. Bustanov | ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm’s Biographical Dictionary on Siberian Islamic...
می‌توان گفت این مطلب قبلاً به هر ارتباطی که اندیشیده شده بود بیشتر خوانده شود. این مطلب از نظر معنوی و دینی بسیار پر از اثبات و نظریات بوده است. البته، این مطلب در ابراهیمی و اثراتی که در مقاله ارسال ویژه انتشار داده شده است، در اینجا نباید نهایی به نظر است. بنابراین، این مطلب در اینجا نباید در نظر گرفته شود.

مطلب ارائه شده در این مقاله، با استفاده از فرهنگ و ادبیات تاریخی و دینی، به گونه‌ای نوشته شده است که نسبت به این موضوعات از نظر علمی و دینی بسیار پر از اثبات و نظریات بوده است. البته، این مطلب در ابراهیمی و اثراتی که در مقاله ارسال ویژه انتشار داده شده است، در اینجا نباید نهایی به نظر است. بنابراین، این مطلب در اینجا نباید در نظر گرفته شود.
Alfrid K. Bustanov | 'Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm’s Biographical Dictionary on Siberian Islamic...
‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm’s Biographical Dictionary on Siberian Islamic...
1891

كان عبد الله بن عبد الحليم في دجلة ساحة الطبل

مروراً بمردودة تقع في ساحة ام وأولى ديني دابة بحديث

أولب هذين مالما تقول لألمبه عند بصرها يبتكر اثناه

نفراء زق بضرب ليذرف فيه سهم بن علي أختس

الكسورين
لا يمكنني قراءة النص العربي في الصورة.
Alfrid K. Bustanov | 'Abd al-Rasid Ibrāhīm’s Biographical Dictionary on Siberian Islamic...
لا يمكنني قراءة النص العربي المكتوب بالручية والكتابة غير الأصلية. هذا يصعب القراءة بشكل طبيعي.
آلفرد ک. بستنوف | ‘عبد الرضی ابراهیم‘ سیرنیکیه سیهیریان از سفرنامه‌های سیهیریان برای بررسی تاریخچه دینی از سیهیریان
درخواهی‌ها! باید به دو راهی برگردد: از دسته‌بندی آیات [تأثیرگذاران] و تأثیرگذاری نتیجه‌بردی که نمی‌توانند باشد، در سیاست اندازه‌گیری و اعتماد به‌بخشی آنها باشد. همواره از این جا می‌تواند که از دو راهی برگردد.

در آن‌جا که هرکدام از این ایام طی‌سال‌ها بازه‌های زخمی، در سیاست‌نامه‌ها و اعتماد به‌بخشی آنها باشد، همگونی غیرقابل‌توجهی که این جماعت بازه‌های زخمی دارد.

در سیاست اندازه‌گیری و اعتماد به‌بخشی آنها باشد. همواره از این جا می‌تواند که از دو راهی برگردد.
\textbf{مقدمه}

خودعبده بر اساس فرهنگنامه‌ایی که در سال ۱۲۳۵ هجری قمری به‌عنوان یکی از اولین فرهنگنامه‌های تاریخ اسلامی انتشار یافت، بر اساس نظرات و افکاری که در آن مطرح شده‌اند، در این بخش به بررسی این نظرات و افکار می‌پردازیم. در اینجا، خواهیم به بررسی نظرات و افکار علی‌التجارتی و اشکالاتی که در آن مطرح شده‌اند، ادامه می‌دهیم.

\textbf{تاریخ}

تاریخ پیش‌زمینه‌ی این تحقیق، به‌طور کلی، از ابتدای دورهٔ اسلامی تا به اواخر دورهٔ قاجاریه می‌باشد. در این دوره، آیین اسلام، به‌ویژه در زمینهٔ آداب و رسوم، از طرفی با جوامع محلی و دیگر جوامع جهان اسلام در تبادلات میان‌رود.

\textbf{جغرافیا}

جغرافیایی این تحقیق نیز به‌طور کلی شامل مطالعهٔ تاریخ و فرهنگ محلی، تاریخ و فرهنگ اسلامی و جغرافیایی اسلامی است. در این بخش، به‌طور کلی، بررسی نشان‌گرفته شده‌است که اسلام در مکان‌های مختلف به‌طوری که از لحاظ جغرافیایی، فرهنگی و تاریخی، معمولاً به‌طور دقیق تر در اینجا شناخته شده‌اند.

\textbf{نگاهی به اسلام}

در این بخش، نگاهی به اسلام به‌صورت کلی و به‌طور دقیق در اینجا شناخته گردیده است. اسلام، به‌طور کلی، به عنوان یکی از اولین دین‌های جهان در تاریخ اسلامی مطرح می‌شود.

\textbf{مطالعه}

مطالعه‌ای که در این بخش ارائه شده است، شامل تحقیق و بررسی نشان‌گرفته شده‌است که اسلام به‌طوری که از لحاظ فرهنگی، تاریخی و جغرافیایی، معمولاً به‌طور دقیق تر در اینجا شناخته شده‌اند.

\textbf{ملاحظات}

در این بخش، ملاحظاتی که در اینجا شناخته گردیده است، شامل ملاحظاتی که در اینجا شناخته گردیده است که اسلام به‌طوری که از لحاظ فرهنگی، تاریخی و جغرافیایی، معمولاً به‌طور دقیق تر در اینجا شناخته شده‌اند.

\textbf{از محوریت‌ها}

از محوریت‌ها که در اینجا شناخته گردیده است، شامل محوریت‌هایی که در اینجا شناخته گردیده است که اسلام به‌طوری که از لحاظ فرهنگی، تاریخی و جغرافیایی، معمولاً به‌طور دقیق تر در اینجا شناخته شده‌اند.

\textbf{در نهایت}

در نهایت، می‌توان گفت که اسلام، به‌طوری که از لحاظ فرهنگی، تاریخی و جغرافیایی، معمولاً به‌طور دقیق تر در اینجا شناخته شده‌اند.
Alfrid K. Bustanov | 'Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm's Biographical Dictionary on Siberian Islamic...
‘عبد الله إبراهيم’ سلسلة من مصادر اسهامه في مدارس الشريعة. في سنة 1886، توفي四级يلائي في تابعه، وهو أفضل من أوائل مدرسي السنيّة في Siberian Islamic...
ათავისობით ინგლისური არ არის შესახებ ჩანს. შეგიძლიათ შეგვიძლიათ გააკეთოთ ტექსტი თუ შეთავაზოთ თქვენი მიზანი და ჩვენ გაეთხოვთ დაწყება.
Translation

/1a/

[The Imams of Tara]

Ibrāhīm b. ‘Abd al-Raḥīm. This person is well known as an akhūnd of Tara. Nobody knows about his deeds, but I know four of his sons. One of them also became an akhūnd, namely ‘Abd al-Raḥīd akhūnd b. Ibrāhīm b. ‘Abd al-Raḥīm. This ‘Abd al-Raḥīd akhūnd was the first [among the Siberian scholars] who received his appointment at the Spiritual Board in the times of Mufti Muḥammad Ān22. He became an akhūnd in 1790. Together with a rich man named Sayyīd [‘Abd al-Raḥīd akhūnd] built a stone mosque in the city of Tara. To put the first stone into the mosque’s fundament, they gathered scholars from [various] places. Then scholars considered that person (i.e. Sayyīd Bay) and found him appropriate [for this mission]. Sayyīd Bāy said: “I did not leave prayer to be paid back (qaḍā), please give me permission to place [the first stone]. The scholars jointly praised him and allowed Sayyīd Bāy this job. This event took place in 1794. /1b/ Permission of the building of a stone mosque from the 19th August 1794 was registered under the number 20898 after decision of a court of Tobol’sk governorate23. Expenses of the mosque construction fell on akhūnd ‘Abd al-Raḥīd, but others also helped. Sayyīd Bāy solved issues with the Russians.

Ibrāhīm b. ‘Abd al-Raḥīd b. Ibrāhīm b. ‘Abd al-Raḥīm was the son of akhūnd ‘Abd al-Raḥīd. Ibrāhīm devoted himself to the eternal world and became a disposer (mutaveli) of a stone mosque built by his father. He covered the roof of the stone mosque by metal and colored it in green. He studied along with trade; twice per week he took lessons on Mathnawī-yi Sharif24. He had three sons: the younger ‘Umar, the middle Bāyazīd, and the elder Muḥammadī. Together with his son Muḥammadī he went on the Hajj in 1834. During the trip the son of Ḥājjī died in Baghdad in his seventeen years old, while [Ibrāhīm b. ‘Abd al-Raḥīd] died in Beyrut, /2a/ when he was forty25. They are buried there, may God’s mercy be upon them. The existing

---

22 | Muḥammad Ān b. al-Ḥusayn b. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān al-Burindiqī (ca. 1758–1824) served as the first Mufti in the history of the Russian Empire (in office between 1789 and 1824) [3, pp. 50–66].

23 | According to archeologist Sergei F. Tatarov (Omsk, Russia), an old wooden mosque in Tara was burned in 1755/56. Since that time Muslims started to send petitions to Russian administration asking to rebuild the mosque. On the city map from 1775 a mosque-in-progress is mentioned, but only the 1802 map indicates a functioning mosque, therefore, in Tatarov’s mind, the building process was finished only around 1801. Thus, due to bureaucratic circumlocution the permission to re-build the mosque was given only after twenty years of the first request. I duplicate here information generously provided by Dr. Tatarov in his private letter to me (10.11.2011).

24 | The Persian text of Mathnawī was used along with its translations and commentaries. However, the Tatar manuscripts of this book are not numerous: there are only three copies at Kazan’ Federal University (F–402, F–505, F–528) and one copy at the National Museum of the Republic of Tatarstan (No. 18363–67, copied by ‘Abd al-Raḥīm al-Uṭīz-Imīani). So far no copies of Mathnawī have been discovered in Western Siberia.

25 | In other work ‘Abd al-Raḥīd Ibrāhīm added: “A bequest, written by our grandfather from the mother’s side Ibrāhīm Bay when he turned his view towards Hijaz, is preserved today at the home of my brother. He died in Beyrut after he visited Damascus on the way back.” [16, p. 12].
mosques in the villages Sayyīd and Uush were built by Ḥājjī. Naṣīr b. Murād Baqī helped in erecting the mosque in a village of Sayyīd, therefore he became known as Naṣīr the beneficent.

Faḍil Ḥājjī from the village of Alman of Chilābī district of Orenburg governorate started to teach in Tara in 1815. When Faḍil Ḥājjī arrived, he was accompanied by two students: Subḥānquīl and Ṣubḥāhīm. [The latter] Ṣubḥāhīm b. Jaʿfar received from Faḍil Ḥājjī and the Tara scholars a consentient appointment [as an Imam]. After that Faḍil Ḥājjī decided to go back home, and people asked him: “Leave us one of your best students for teaching and explaining [religion]”. They left my grandfather [from mother side] Ṣubḥāhīm b. Jaʿfar, who was from a respected family. When Faḍil Ḥājjī returned to Alman, he sent the women of Ibrāhīm’s [the son of Yar Khūn] daughters: Fāṭīma, ʿAṣīfa, and ʿAṣīfa. Fāṭīma gave birth to ‘Abd Allāh b. Naṣīr Allāh, ‘Aṣīfa — to us, ‘Abd al-Rasāḥīd, and Ismaʿīl. ʿAṣīfa [gave birth to] Ayyūb b. Khāfiḍ. The rest [of his kids] died. In 1832 [Ibrāhīm] again visited Tara, after that he went to Tashkent and there he went to the Mercy of God. He was supposedly buried in the mosques in the villages Sayyīd and Uush. In 1839 Muḥammad Maḥdīb b.  taught in Tara. Biography of this Bashkir is unknown.

In 1831 Dawlat Bāqī b. ʿAlī Aṣgar became an Imam [in Tara]. He obtained his education in Bukhara. After four years of performing the duties of Imam he occasionally came across a question of new moon [in the context of Islamic fast]. Because of his weakness in front of the arguments of the opponent, [Dawlat Bāqī] understood the importance of astronomy. In order to study the subject, he went to Bukhara. He studied eagerly, obtained some [astronomical] instruments there and went back to Tara, but on the way stopped in Aqmullā, where was killed. His books and instruments were transferred to the heirs. In particular, one of the instruments had on its surface a noble verse “The Skies and Land are embraced by His Throne”[32]

26 | A Tatar village Sayyīd awūli or Khwāja awūl (Rus. Seitovo) is still located in Tara region of Omsk oblast.
27 | Before the Revolution in Tashkent there were two madrasas with the same name of Shūkūr Khān. One of them, located in the quarter of Kukcha, was open in the early 19th century. Most probably, this is the madrasa mentioned here. More details on the Shūkūr Khān madrasa: [19, pp. 153–154].
28 | ‘Abd al-Rasāḥīd Ṣubḥāhīm summarized this information in his later work: "The father of my mother Ibrahim Mulla originated from the village of Alman. After performing the duties of a teacher in Tara, he went to Tashkent, where he passed away after a plenty of time teaching. He was buried near the Shūkūr Khān madrasa." [16, p. 18, footnote 1].
30 | The name of his father is not mentioned.
31 | Aqmullā was the former name of Astana, the capital of Republic of Kazakhstan.
32 | Qur’an, 2:255.
was written. [This instrument] fell into the hands of Naṣr al-Dīn b. Niyyāz in Tara\(^3\), who placed it in the Tobol’sk museum. Since that time it is preserved there.

In 1841 Fayḍ Allāh b. ‘Alī Aṣḡar after studying in Bukhara taught in Tara. He lived 61 year, studied a lot and became a martyr while performing the pilgrimage in 1852. He was a well-educated, dignified and pious person. Many of his books, unfortunately, did not return [from his last trip], with an exception of a copy of Ḥiyā’ \(‘ulīm [ad-dīn]\). This is an excellent, exceptionally old copy. In the end the manuscript moved to the hands of Mahdī b. Saydek, who exchanged it with Ni’mat Allāh Ḥājjī to a modern printed book. Nowadays [this manuscript] is kept at the library of Ni’mat Allāh Ḥājjī in Tiumen’. /3b/ Descendants [of Fayḍ Allāh] lacked God’s blessing and lost all books. Now one of his sons is living in the village of Bīrnāsh\(^3\).

Since 1853 Mahdī b. Saydek was a teacher in the Tara madrasa\(^3\). This person originated from the village of Ishīn Tamāq\(^3\) in Tara district of Sārghāch volost’. He was from the Qurtāq tribe. He obtained his education from the Tara madrasa at the time of damulla Fayḍ Allāh, reached a stage of excellency [in sciences] and became accustomed to studying all the time. He was an extremely learned person and also acquainted with the Russian system. Being familiar with each local community (\(maḥalla\)) in the Tara district, he served as muḥtasib in the times of mufti ‘Abd al-Wāḥid\(^3\). Therefore, [every time] when an Imam of a certain village passed away, he used to take register books (\(mītrīkā dāftāre\)) of this village and did not give a permission to elect a new Imam. This way at the end of his life he appeared to be an Imam of fourteen villages. /4a/ These villages were dispersed on three hundred versts: on the one side there were [the villages] Olli Qūl\(^3\) and Tārlar-Tāzlar; on the other side there were Ayīm and Ishīn Tamāq. Once, when his children studied in Uush, in a village Soldatovo\(^3\), which is located in a half a verst, in a house of infidels (i.e. Russians) several people were killed. When the majority of stolen from that house things were discovered in the living house of Mahdī b. Saydek, he was blamed in robbery and murder. For further investigation they chained his arms and legs and sent him to the fortress in the Kolossov province. After that they transferred him to Tara for inquiry. Because the famous and rich men of Tara respected scholarship and because [Mahdī’s] wife was a relative to the Aytikins’ mother, [the Aytikins] collected a lot of money to release [him from prison]. After [his jail release, Mahdī b. Saydek] settled in Tara and occupied position of Imam for a while. He had a quarrel with ‘Abd al-Fattāḥ b. Niyyāz [Aytikin]\(^4\) because of money [donated by Niyyāz Aytikin to the 33 | Naṣr al-Dīn b. Niyyāz (d. 1894) belonged to the Aytikins family and was the son of Niyyāz b. Ḥaydar (1777–1847).

34 | Present-day village of Bernagul’ (Rus. Berniazhka) in Tara region of Omsk oblast.
35 | Cf.: [12, pp. 206–207].
36 | Present-day village Ust’-Ishim in Omsk region.
37 | ‘Abd al-Wāḥid (1786–1862) occupied the post of Mufti in 1840–1862.
38 | Present-day village Ollu Qul (Rus. Bol’shie Murly) in Bol’sherech’e region of Omsk oblast.
39 | Today the village Zur Uush (Rus. Bol’shie Turaly) in Tara region of Omsk oblast incorporates the Russian village Soldatovo.
40 | ‘Abd al-Fattāḥ b. Niyyāz (d. 1883), nicknamed as ‘Patta’, was the oldest son of Niyyāz Aytikin and a successful merchant with trading centres in Pavlodar, Semipalatinsk, Vernyi (Almaty), and Tara [20, p. 123].
mosque]. In 1866 [Mahdī] took the money in his hands. /4b/ After being involved in a great trouble he resigned from his post of muḥtasib in 1868. When time passed, after reconciling with a merchant ‘Abd al-Fattāḥ and others, he slaughtered a sheep, feed people and claimed: “I took the post again and became a muḥtasib.” At that time, when the trouble was settled, they agreed [to recognize Mahdī’s claim] without demanding a proof. [therefore] it is unclear whether he [really] had a permission (ukaz) or any other document, but he became a muḥtasib again and carried out his duty until the end of his days.

During his life time [Saydek] married sixteen women. This was of some profit: when a rich man died, the muḥtasib used to marry his widow, take the property, and then to divorce. If there was a beautiful women, he could blame a husband in infidelity (takfīr), deliver a judgment to deprive the wife, and then marry her himself. [This way] he married many widows and virgins. Even at the end of his life in his seventy five /5a/ he married a sixteen-years-old girl from a village Oḷī Qūl; this was in 1890. At the end of his life he became known for beautiful Qur'an recitation (tīlāwat) and apologized to everybody. In January 1891 he suddenly passed away in a settlement (zaimka) Būksim in three verstas from Tara. Some people say that he was poisoned, but there is no proof. His grave is there, may God’s mercy be upon him.

‘Ashūr Bāqī b. Rajab Bāqī was an Imam [in Tara] between 1837 and 1887. The start of his life was marked by prosperity, but he ended up in poverty. His descendants were rather unfortunate. Before his appointment Imamat in the city of Tara functioned without any conflicts for a century. This person was the only one who did not accept property [well-being of religious authorities who did not work], and caused a trouble. Some Mullas left their positions by their own will; others were fired by the government.

Raḥmat Allāh b. Yūsuf from a village Iaŋgūrāz in Temnikovsky district of Tambov governorate was a teacher at the Tara madrasa since 1856. During his teaching at the Tara madrasa this person enjoyed a wide fame; his students were numerous and gathered from many places. Raḥmat Allāh taught there for more than twenty years, married the daughter of a rich man Mīr Şāliḥ, and was so pious that he did not possess any windows [at home] on the street side and those windows that were close to the street were locked. From two to five of his students were strong. /5b/ One of them, Ḥamza b. Muḥammad Amīn was an Imam in the city of Tūm (Tomsk). Another, Muṭaṣim b. Bilāl was an Imam in a village of Qomāw in the Tobol’sk governorate. Raḥmat Allāh b. Yūsuf lived in Tara very well and gained much prosperity: more than ten thousand Rubles. As a result of a conflict with merchants, in 1876 he decisively

41 | “Ashūr Bāqī b. Rajab Bāqī was an Imam in Ţara together with damullāh Raḥmatullāh ḫaḍrat. He was buried in the city of Ţara” [8, f. 1a].
42 | ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm remembers that he had a possibility to study with Raḥmat Allāh in Tara, but by unclear reasons his father preferred to send him to Alman in the Orenburg governorate. [16, p. 17]. Cf. his biography: [12, pp. 139–143]. “Raḥmat Allāh b. Yūsuf was born in the village Yāŋgūrāz of the Tmnkūf district in the Ţanbāv governorate. He studied for fifteen years at a school of damullāh Ismā’īl b. Mūsā in Ĭṣqār. In 1856 he arrived to the city of Ţara, where he started to teach at the age of thirty five. He spent twenty years in Ţara and moved to the city of Qızıl Yar, where he taught for five years and was buried there. Ḥamza Ḥamīḏūf and Muṭaṣim Bilālūf are his students” [8, f. 1a].
moved from Tara to Petropavlovsk. Before becoming an Imam there Rahmat Allah remained unemployed for nine years, because of some trouble. Only in 1884 he was appointed and started to teach, but already in 1887 he passed away there. May God’s mercy be upon him.

In 1885, after my return from Medina the Radiant to Tara, I, a weak ‘Abd al-Rashid b. ‘Umar b. Ibrahim b. ‘Abd al-Rashid b. Ibrahim b. ‘Abd al-Rahim, became an Imam-khatib and teacher [at the Tara madrasa]. On 7th January 1891 I was appointed as an akhund according to the decision number thirty four of the provincial government. On 22nd April 1892 the Ministry of Interior Affairs granted me an appointment as a judge (qāḍī) under the number 1837. /6а/ Details of my biography are treated in my work Zevâl ba’dında newâl yaki Zillet ba’dinda ‘izzet43. Those who are interested can consult that book.

Rural Mulas of the Tara district

Niyyâz Muhammed akhund b. Murâd lived in Tüzqazan44, which is located in sixty versts away from Tara. In 1790 he became an akhund and died in 1838. He was the leader of those who were dismissed after Mulla ‘Abd al-Jalîl’s examination. Though originating from Bukharans, [his father] Murâd registered himself as a native (inorodets), therefore his descendants today are regarded as such45.

‘Abd al-Malîk b. Niyyâz Muhammed was an akhund of the same village and accepted this post from his father. He was very simple and a great joker. When he has already become an akhund, small children used to /6b/ call him Mulla ‘Abd. He argued much with the local population46.

‘Abd al-‘Alîm b. ‘Abd al-Malîk was an Imam of the abovementioned village since 1863. He studied with damullâ Nûr Allah b. ‘Abd Allah47 in a village Sâtlî Khân48 of Tobolsk district. He served as Imam for twenty six years and continued improving his knowledge. Only at the end of his life ‘Abd al-‘Alîm changed his attitude towards studies. His physical power and impressive body guaranteed that population and elite (al-‘awwam wa-l-khawwas) were careful to his words. He did not reach his goals and died when he was around 73 years old in 1889. ‘Abd al-‘Alîm was buried in Tüzqazan. Two of his sons are living there.

43 | ‘Abd al-Rashid b. Ibrahim’s work under this title is not familiar to me and is not mentioned in the list of his writings [21, pp. 102–130; 22, pp. 416–418]. It might be that he had in mind his biographical book that was published under the title Terçüme-i Halim in St. Petersburg in 1912.
44 | Tuzkazan’ is located in the Bol’sherech’e region of Omsk oblast’.
45 | Most probably Murâd moved to the iasachnye category. According to the Russian legislation those who immigrated to Siberia as a state farmer (gosudartsvenny krest’ianin) were obliged to fulfil the military service and pay additional taxes. See other examples of similar shift in status: [23, p. 53].
46 | The following sentence was crossed out: “After examination of mulla ‘Abd al-Jalîl he (‘Abd al-Malîk) was fired.”
47 | “Nûr Allah b. ‘Abd Allah Bâirtkâyûf, whom you have mentioned, was born in the village Iri of the Qûrdjî volost in the Târâ district, but the date is unknown. For five years he studied with Bây Murâd ḥadrat in Qâzân and then for a couple of years he taught in the village of Dâtlû Khân which is located in three verst from Tobol’sk [city]. He became very old and died of asthma in his seventy. He was buried in the village Dâtlû Khân in 1861” [8, f. 1a].
48 | This village in the Tobol’sk region does not exist anymore.
In 1891 'Abd al-Salām b. 'Abd al-Karīm b. 'Abd al-Salām Ishān Saydāshev at-Tobūli became an Imam in Tūzqazan\(^49\). He was so greedy for worldly goods that when collecting a tenth (‘ushr) from the village inhabitants, he took it from infidels [i.e. Russians] too.\(^7a/\) Therefore he was in a great quarrel with locals. In a short period of time he managed to collect much wealth. In 1893 'Abd al-Salām went to Hajj together with 'Abd al-Raqī b. 'Abd al-Wāḥid. There, in Mecca the Honoured, he passed away. He obtained his education in Bukhara.

In the same year 'Abd al-Ḥakīm b. Khayr Allāh b. Ṭāir Khān b. Yārīm was elected [as an Imam] in Tūzqazan. He is not yet officially approved, may God help him. In 1894 he was finally employed as an Imam. Though he does not teach, he has a good reputation as an educated person. Fortunately, he returned from his trip to the provinces of Egypt and Hijaz\(^50\).

\(^7b/\) 'Ubayd Allāh b. Niyyāz Muḥammad b. Murād served as an Imam in Shikhler or Rājāb which is located fifteen verstes away from Tara\(^51\). At that time he was a famous scholar, a master of word, a possessor of high morals, and a modest person. After arrival from that village to the city (i.e. Tara), he visited lessons every day. 'Ubayd Allāh was totally indifferent to fame. In 1874 he went to the Hajj, but did not receive a pass and returned from Odessa. The duty of Hajj he fulfilled later in 1875. After a safe return, he established many pious endowments: in the village of Tūskazan he built a madrasa and set up a lecturing room. They have books there. His children and grandchildren were insignificant. 'Ubayd Allāh died in his seventy five years in 1882 and was buried in Shikhler.

Urāz Muḥammad b. 'Awwas b. Mādī, a native of this village of Rājāb, known by his nickname (lagāb) as Tutāy, became an Imam in Qızıl Qāsh in 1822. He was a great master of the spoken word and a joker. His courtesy was very pleasant. In 1828 twelve Mulas of the Tara district jointly examined Mulla 'Abd al-Jalīl b. Khiwetī. They found him suitable to be an Imam, and wrote a letter to [the Orenburg Muslim Spiritual] Assembly: “We accepted the exam, but there is an obstacle for going to Assembly and holding an exam there — he is lacking health. Therefore please give him a permission to be an Imam without an official exam.” Then \(^8a/\) all those who signed the letter were fired. Their leader Niyyāz Muḥammad akhūnd [from Tūzqazan] was fired too. On this occasion Tutāy Mulla made a joke: every year crop fields are getting frozen, this year Mulas and akhūnds were frozen too.

When my father-in-law Ḥurrem Shāh b. Haydar\(^52\) returned from the Ḥājj, Tutāy Mulla accompanied by two other Mulas came to visit him. Thereby Ḥājjī gifted each \(^49\) ‘Abd al-Salām Ishān lived in the Tobol’sk region. You say that you have no information about him. He received a license (markhas) in Bukhara the Noble in the khānaqa of khālaqa Niyāz Qul Ishān Turkmānī ḥaḍrat. ‘Abd al-Salām Ishān was a teacher and died of bayma decease in the village Bāyān Yūrshaq of the Tobol’sk district of Tobol’sk governorate on 29 March 1844, when he was 68 years old. It appeared that aristocrats (mtrzā) were buried in the village of Yūrshaq, but no registers exist. That year no register out of fifty five was found. We know that he was born in 1776, but the exact date is unknown” [8, f. 1a].

\(^50\) Present day village Rechapovo is a part of settlement Mezhdurech’e in Tara region of Omsk oblast’.

\(^52\) Ḥurrem Shāh b. Ḥaydar b. Yārīm b. Ḥaydar b. Mīr ‘Alī b. Sayyīd Muḥammad b. Dm ‘Alī died in 1877. He was an elderly brother of famous Siberian merchant Niyāz Aytīkin, lived in Tara. A comprehensive genealogy of Ḥurrem Shāh and all of his close relatives between the 16th and early 20th centuries survived as a manuscript entitled Kitāb shaqarat al-nasab khwājagān [24, f. 45].
Mulla with a rosary with thirty three granules. A certain rich man named Kūchī was also at that meeting. He was praised with a rosary of ninety nine granules. In response Tutāy Mulla said that he understood superiority of ninety nine granules over thirty three: one rich man appeared to be equal to three Mulas.

On the way back from examination he stayed for two years in the outskirts of Tobol’sk, studying with ‘Abd al-Salām Ishān. After that, when he returned to Tara, one of his fellows asked him, whether he studied properly. The answer was “I studied very well and for a long time.”

His descendants were rather fruitless. He died in 1848 and was buried in the village Qızıl Qāsh. In our times one of his sayings turned to be the opposite. It was always like this: a birth of Mulla from Mulla is a custom; a birth of an ignorant from Mulla is unbelivable. Nowadays indeed Mulla gives birth to an ignoramus.

/8b/ In 1842 Nur Allāh b. ‘Abd Allāh Bāṛıkāev became an Imam in the village of Yirdī⁵³ of the Utūz volost of the Tara district. He was a very smart person. His father, ‘Abd Allāh akhūnd, came from Russia and in order to save children from military service registered himself as a native (inorodets). In 1815 he studied Tawḍīh with Faḍıl Ḥājjī, when the latter was an akhūnd. Nur Allāh is originally from a village of Kāyna in Perm governorate. He is a Bahkir. I have seen a letter to Nur Allāh from Mulla Nu’mān b. Sa’īd from the village of Qāmaqa in Cheremshan volost of the Spassk district. From the letter it has become clear that [Nur Allāh] was a student of the writer (i.e. Mulla Nu’mān). The year is unknown, only fifth January is mentioned. This person [Nur Allāh] is bound with a Mulla Jalālī akhūnd Yūsufī. At the end of his life Nur Allāh taught in Sāṭlī Khān near Tobol’sk. In 1861 he died there. His descendants were unfortunate. One of his sons is a very bad Imam in the village Yirī.

Husām ad-Dīn b. ‘Alī b. ⁵⁴ was an Imam in a village of Qızıl Qāsh or ‘Aydqul⁵⁵ which is located twenty five versts away from Tara. He studied in Bukhara and was a simple, eloquent, and forthright person. In 1860 he became an Imam and died in 1865. He did not have children.

/9a/ ‘Umar b. Muḥammadī b. ⁵⁶ was an Imam and teacher in the village of Aubāṭqān⁵⁷, which is located 120 versts away from Tara. He studied for twenty years in Bukhara. ‘[Umar] was an easily irritable person. He died in 1877 and was buried in the village of Aubāṭqān. He did not have children.

---

⁵³ | Most probably ‘Yird’ refers to the village 1a-Irtyshskaia in Omsk region. See: [25, pp. 113–134].
⁵⁴ | “Husām al-Dīn b. ‘Alī, whom you have mentioned, was born in the village Qızıl Qāsh, which is located in twenty five versts from Ṭārā. He studied in Bukhara the Noble in the khānaqa of Khalīfa Husayn and received a license (markhas). When he returned back, he taught at that village and was buried there. It is known from the register [compiled by] Ḥalīḍīf that Ḥusām al-Dīn was an Imam and Mulla” [8, f. 1a].
⁵⁵ | This village in the Tara region of Omsk oblast’ disappeared in the late 2000s.
⁵⁶ | “‘Umar b. Muḥammadī, whom you have mentioned, was born in Yaḡa awil, which is located in hundred versts from the aforementioned Ṭārā. Several years he studied in the village of Șawṣqān of Tobol’sk governorate with Ishān Hūjām Wīrdī and afterwards he went to Bukhara the Noble. There he studied for thirty years together with Ḥusām al-Dīn b. ‘Alī, received upbrinnging and knowledge in the aforementioned khānaqa of Khalīfa Husayn. After return he taught for a couple of years in Yaḡa awil, where he was then buried” [8, f. 1a].
⁵⁷ | This village was located in Bol’sherech’e region of Omsk oblast’ and mainly inhabited by the Siberian Bukharans.
Habib Allah b. Nad Baqi was an Imam in Tar Tamaq\(^5\). He was among ‘the frozen Mullas’ in the Mulla ‘Abd al-Jalil’s affair of 1825. He died in 1841.

Dost Muhammed b. Muhammed Baqi from the village Uush was also among the ‘frozen’. He was a temporary Imam in Qizil Qash.

‘Abd al-Jalil b. Khilef b. Rahim Baqi b. ‘Ashur Baqi b. Nadir Baqi b. al-Muhammed at-Turkistani b. ‘Abd al-Razzaq. He was an unregistered young teacher in the village Qizil Qash, which is located twenty five versts away from Tara. His health was not perfect; therefore Imams of the Tara district freed him from the exam [in Ufa], which he was not able to attend, but they found him suitable for the position /9b/ and collectively sent a report to [the Muslim Spiritual] Assembly. Afterwards those Mullas who signed that report were fired. ‘Abd al-Jalil served an Imam and teacher without a license.

Husayn b. Uraz Muhammad belonged to the Ayali tribe (tajfa). He studied with Mulla Ibrahim in Tara and then went to Tashkent to study with another Ibrahim. In 1838 he got sick and returned with a caravan to Tara. Here he recovered and became an Imam in the village of Talar-Tazar in 1845. In 1851 [Husayn] used his Imam license (ukaz) as a guarantee to a Russian merchant from a village Jawar and took from him twenty five Rubles as an interest-free loan (qard hasan). The same year that Russian died. He did not have money to give back for five month, but after that he [brought money] and asked the Russian heirs about the document. The answer was: “We do not know about any license. Our father was not an appointed Imam.” In 1858 during an inventory in the village of Birnash or Ubay they did not find the date and number of his license, and [Husayn] lost his post. /10a/ He got sick for several years. Though he explained the situation many times, [Husayn] failed to return his position. It is now possible to do without the explanation of another story of that man’s biography, still I found it is appropriate to give one more account. And this is an extraordinary story that is unlike everything else.

Mulla Husayn b. Uraz Muhammad\(^6\) hated one person in the village so that he wanted to beat him, but did not want to be shamed by the settlers and took a bit of time to take rest. He took one day to recur to his mind and decided to drink some alcohol not to feel shame. Late at night he went to the Russian village nearby, got drunk there and asked an alcohol seller: “Do I look drunk?” The seller answered: “No.” He did not know the drinker, but he was aware of the signs of drunkenness. Then [Husayn] said that he wants to fight that person [whom he hated] and that

---

58 | Present-day village Ust’ Tara in Tara region of Omsk oblast’.
59 | ‘Turkistan’ here means not the region, but rather the city of Turkistan known in the middle ages as Yas and located in the Chimkent region of Republic of Kazakhstan.
60 | The Ayali tribe was located around the city of Tara. Ethnographer N.A. Tomilov included it into the group of the Tara Tatars [26, p. 45].
61 | In the text mistakenly: Arzū Muhammed.
he is not afraid of him. It was already very dark, when he went back to his village. Almost as a warrior (they call him Ḥusayn the Hero) he got ready for a battle and went directly to the enemy’s house. /10b/ Such a camel!!! /11a/ There were so many stories with Ḥusayn the Hero like this that one could compile a book. Now he is seventy five years old, but does not have white hairs on his head and beard. He is absolutely black so that he looks like forty five years old. He died in 1894 and was buried in the village of Birnash.

Sabānchī b. Yār Muḥammad was a famous scholar of the Tobol’sk district. He was a very pious and dignified person. He brought up many students. In the 1221 year of Hijra [1806–07] Sabānchī went to Ḥājī. It was the starting Ḥajj of Siberian scholars. This person died around 1832 r. From ‘Abd al- Raḥman Sirāḡ, a scholar from Hijaz and Medina the Rediant, he received a special decision (istifā) concerning the necessity of the night prayer (‘isha) during short nights in Siberia.

/11b/ A great scholar Khwājām Bīrdī b.  known as Būṭīk lived in a village Sāwusqān which is located fifteen versts away from Tobol’sk. He thought that the night prayer during the short nights is not obligatory. Sabānchī Mulla discovered for him very good treatises on the topic of night prayer. [Khwājām Bīrdī] did not accept any of them, even the treatise of ‘Abd al-Raḥman Sirāḡ from Mecca the Honourable. After that he turned to a treatise by a famous scholar ‘Abd al-Nāṣr Qūrṣāwī. He read it, accepted [the arguments], and smoothly conducted the night prayer. [Khwājām Bīrdī] died around 1855.

/12a/ Well-informed Sabānchī b. Yār Muḥammad was an Imam in the village of Nūr Bāqī Qullārī which is located twenty versts from Tobol’sk. Rūzī Ṣāḥīb b. ‘Umar was a very famous person. He died in a village of Shūlgūn around 1857. This village is located fifteen versts from Tobol’sk. In Tobol’sk he

---

62 | This anecdote goes on until the middle of f. 11a. For details see the facsimile.
63 | The last sentence was added later.
64 | Cf.: [14, p. 61]. “Sabānchī b. Yār Muḥammad was born in the village Mīrām Qullār which is located in thirty five versts from Tobol’sk in 1759. After studying in Bukhara the Noble he returned to Mīrām Qullār, where he taught until his eighty four years old. He died in 1853 and was buried in the same village. Many of his students are Imams, [for example] Mulla Fakhr al-Dīn b. Yārīqāsh in the village of Wāghāy in Tobol’sk governorate who is ninety years old now. Akhūnd Ṭāḥ Tīmer is living in the Yalūtor district of Tumān region. Many others were also his students, I do not remember all of them” [8, f. 1 a].
65 | This means that before 1806–07 Siberian Muslims were not allowed to go to Mecca.
66 | Cf.: [14, p. 73]. “Khwājām Wīrdī Ṣāḥīb, whom you have mentioned, originated from the descendants of Ḥūjam Wīrdī b. Suyūnch Bāqī from among the military group (yūmushī jāʾīfa) in the village of Sāwīsqān which is located in twelve versts from Tobol’sk. He went to Bukhara the Noble and received there a license of a Sufi vicar (markhas-i khalīfa) in the khānaqa Mirāth of ḥaḍrat Kulūn Ṣāḥīb Zāde, who was a great scholar. Khwājām Wīrdī Ṣāḥīb taught a number of years in that village of Sāwīsqān. He had many students. Mulla Bāshīr, an Imam and teacher in the village Qarāghāy of the Qarāghāy volost of the Tobol’sk governorate, was among them. The aforementioned Khwājām Wīrdī Ṣāḥīb was buried in this Sāwīsqān” [8, f. 2 b].
67 | Cf.: [14, p. 138]. “Rūzī Ṣāḥīb, whom you have mentioned, originated from the group of Šārts (ṣārtiya jamāʾītī) in the village of Shūlkūn in the Tobol’sk governorate, which is located in twelve versts from Tobol’sk. He studied in Bukhara the Noble together with the aforementioned Khwājām Wīrdī Ṣāḥīb and received a license from one teacher (ustāḏ). There is no birth register. It is known that he died of yāṭīl in his seventy seven years in the village of Shūlkūn which is in two versts from Sāwīsqān of the same district on 26 September 1872. He was buried there” [8, f. 2 b]. converted to Islam one of the big Russian merchants, who himself invited Ishan for declaration of the [faith] testimony. His children did not understand him.

Suyūch Bāqī b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz was an Imam in the village of Qumārāw, which is located in twenty five versts from Tobol’sk. He died in 1875.

/12b/ Qurbān ‘Alī b. Abū Shiḥma was an Imam in Kazanlī village of the Tobol’sk district. He brought up many students and died around 1870. Three of his sons serve now as Imams in the Tobol’sk district. Two of them are not significant, whereas the third, named Abū Shiḥma, is rather strong in scholarship. He also produced some students.

So far we have mentioned only those Imams, may God’s Mercy be upon them, who have already passed away. Let me shortly mention the contemporary Imams. Today twenty five Imams are serving in thirty five mosques of the Tara district. If five of them are worthy, the rest cannot distinguish north (shimāl) and right (yamīn), leanness (hīzāl) and fatness (samīn), Khitay and Khotan, the right direction (karte) and the opposite (chiten), dumbness (bakam) and “how much” (bi-kam), stomach (shikem) and having sex (segam). Decrease of brains, disease of understandings, emptiness of results, doubled stupidity, latent madness, difficulty of concentration, trust in slandering are the results of it. There are Imams even of such level that they do not know how to perform funerals. I was amazed when I heard from a trusted person how an Imam performed funerals. May God correct this situation!

/13a/ ‘Ismat Allāh Būrūndūkūv is among Siberian scholars that should be mentioned. He was a teacher and Mulla in the village of Mānchil or Yānbāy of the Tiumen’ district, where he arrived due to invitation of Qārimshaq Saydūkov in 1856 and therefore established teaching there. He originated from a village in the Ḥwālīn district of the Saratov governorate. He studied in Machqara as well as in Bukhara, but lived there only for a short time. I do not know his scientific level, but between 1856 and 1893 he had always been busy with teaching 200–300 seekers of knowledge. One of his students became a teacher and now he is an Imam in our Tara district. He is among the aforementioned twenty five Imams, but this student stayed at the madrasa only fifteen years. If he would stay ten years longer, he could have joined those five distinguished [scholars mentioned above].

---

68 | This is one of the rare examples of a Russian Muslim of the 19th centuries. For more information about the history of Islam among the Russians see: [27].
69 | “Imam of the Muslims Ḥājjī Suyūch Bāqī b. ‘Abd al-‘Azīz was born in the village Qomārāv of the Tobol’sk governorate in 1802. He studied with ‘Abd al-Nāṣir ḡadrat in Almān. He served as an Imam and teacher of this village Qomārāv and died in 1877. He was buried on the local cemetery” [8, f. 2b].
70 | Cf.: [14, p. 135]. “Qurbān ‘Alī b. Abū Shiḥma, whom you have mentioned, was born in the village Qāzanlī of the Uvād volost in the Tobol’sk governorate. The concrete date is unknown. In Machkara he studied with damulla ‘Abd Allāh b. Yaḥyā al-Chartūshī ḡadrat. He taught in the village of Qāzanlī for a couple of years. He died in his sixty seven in circa 1872 and was buried in the aforementioned village Qāzanlī” [8, f. 2b].
Mu'taṣim b. Bilāl is an Imam in Qomārāw village of the Tobol'sk region. He studied in Tara with Raḥmat Allāh b. Yūṣuf. This person, though he was first subject to different calls from abroad and was also imprisoned by the state, since his release from prison he is busy with teaching the students at madrasa. In 1893 he also became an akhūnd. Today in Tobol’sk /13b/ region he is the best among scholars.

ʿAbd al-Khāliq b.  is an Imam-khaṭīb and muḥtasib of Bīk village in the Tobol’sk region. This person is living with four wives. Today he has forty six children, but I do not know from how many mothers. He is still alive.

---

72 | “Imam and akhūnd Mu’taṣim b. Bilāl was born in the village Qomārāw of the Tobol’sk governorate on 6 January 1838. I went to the city of Ṭārā in the year [18]56 and studied with damulla Raḥmatullāh b. Mulla Yūṣuf during fifteen years. In 1871 I came back to the village Qomārāw, opened a school Khaliṣāliya, where I taught children for five years without an appointment (ukaz). In [18]81 I passed an exam at the Spiritual Assembly, on 3 August [18]82 I received a license (ukaz). Now I carry out Imamat and teaching, I am fifty eight years old” [8, f. 2a].

73 | A manuscript with his autographs is preserved at the National Library of the Republic of Tatarstan, manuscript no. 1062T. See their photographic reproduction in [7, p. 35].

74 | Mu’taṣim b. Bilāl provides us with some more biographies of Siberian Islamic scholars:

“Ḥaḍrat ‘Ayd Muhammad akhūnd Chanāyūf was born in the village Aḡhīd Bāsh of Uvād volost in the Tobol’sk governorate in 1805. He studied in Qazan with damulla Ḫaḥīq ḥaḍrat. In 1835 he went home, became an akhūnd and muḥtasib. He died in his seventy years old in 1877 and was buried in the aforementioned village Aḡhīd Bāsh.

Sabānchī b. Bāghāy was born in the village Ṭūḡīz of Uvād volost in the Tobol’sk governorate in 1710. He studied in Almān with a certain ʿAbd al-Karīm ṣaḥīf and died in his ninety years in 1800.

Navrūz b. Sabānchī was born in the village of Ṭūḡīz of Uvād volost in the Tobol’sk governorate in 1800. He studied at the school of famous Sabānchī b. Ṭāq Muhammad, who studied in Bukhara the Noble, in the village Qullār of the Tobol’sk governorate. In 1812 he received a position (ukaz) [of an Imam]. He died in his sixty seven years old in 1867, on the fifty fifth year of his Imamat, and was buried in the aforementioned village Ṭūḡīz.

Mulla Muḥammad Raḥīm b. Navrūz was born in the village of Ṭūḡīz of Uvād volost in the Tobol’sk governorate in 1811. He studied in Qazan [region] in the school of Machqara with damulla ḥaḍrat ʿAbd Allāh b. Yāḥyā al-Chartāṣīḥ. He received an appointment (ukaz) in 1844 and for several years he was an Imam and teacher. On the thirty third year of being ana Imam and teacher he died in the aforementioned village of Ṭūḡīz in 1874 r.

Muḥammad Sharīf b. Muḥammad Raḥīm was born in the village of Ṭūḡīz of Uvād volost in the Tobol’sk governorate in 1838. He studied at the Machqara school with damulla ḥaḍrat ʿAbd Allāh b. Yāḥyā al-Chartāṣīḥ and after his death at the school of damulla Muḥīṣ Allāh b. Māqsūd. With time he became one of the famous khāṭīf. He died in his twenty six years old in 1864, directly in the class-room of damulla Muḥīṣ Allāh. Mulla Yaʿqūb b. Mulla Muḥammad Raḥīm in the same village of Ṭūḡīz. He studied in Machqara with damulla Muḥīṣ Allāh Māqsūd. In 1871 he received an appointment (ukaz). He is still alive and is an Imam of the village Ṭūḡīz.

Mulla Muḥammad Ḥāfīz b. Muḥammad Raḥīm was born in the village of Ṭūḡīz of Uvād volost in the Tobol’sk governorate. First he studied for twelve years in the village of Mālchīn of Tiumen’ district with damulla ʿĪsmat Allāh b. Sayf al-Dīn ḥaḍrat from the village Yirlīq (? of the Ḩwālīn district of the ʿṢarāṭāv governorate and then he moved to ʿArabīstān. He lived there several years and then became an Imam and teacher in the village of Qızīl Bāy of Tobol’sk governorate and is still working there.

Mulla Bāhāʾ al-Dīn b. Mulla Muḥammad Raḥīm was born in the village of Ṭūḡīz of Uvād volost in the Tobol’sk governorate. He studied with the same damulla ʿImat Allāh b. Sayf al-Dīn ḥaḍrat. He was eleven years with him and then spent three years with Ḫaḥīq ʿAbd al-Ḥaṭīm b. Ṭāṭāʾ Allāh ḥaḍrat al-ʿQūsāwī in Yāṛqānd. He came back to Ṭūḡīz and presently does not have any appointment. This person is the youngest son of damulla Muḥammad Raḥīm. He is approximately twenty five years now.

Ishān ʿĀyd Muḥammad b. Niyāyāz was born in the village Qomārāw of the Tobol’sk governorate in 1786 r. He studied in Bukhara the Noble, where he entered ḥarīqāt. After return back he taught for several years. He died in 1844.
/14a/ Muḥammad Shākir b. Muḥammad Baqī became an Imam in the city of Tobol’sk in 1873. He studied with Mulla ‘Imad ad-Dīn in the village of Mānchil near Tiumen and also half a year in the village of Alman in Cheliabinsk district. He was satisfied with this [education]. On the Holy Ramaḍān of 1890, at night, when a quarter guard Ṭāsh Muḥammad Qul-Muḥammadadūf entered an ordinary house performing his police duty, Mulla Muḥammad Shākir was drinking wine there. He rose to his feet and threatened Qul-Muḥammadadūf: “Why did not you go to the tarawīḥ prayer, why are you hiding here?” His opponent got struck, though he has a right to quarrel with the Imam!!!

/14b/ Among the Tara merchants in the Tobolsk region a Bukharan Niyyāz b. ‘Aytuka was a honourable person, worthy of gratitude. This person was very influential and he loved scholars. In 1820 he decided to perform the duty of pilgrimage and went to Hijaz. His two-year passport is still preserved in a frame on the wall of his heirs’ house. He studied the recitation of Qur’an (qira’at) for six month in Cairo. After his return he used to spent time studying the science of recitation between [the prayers] al-‘aṣr and al-maghrib. He was so influential in the local government that once he even fired a mayor of Tara, after inviting him to the court. Everybody from the lower part of the city of Tara, be it Russian or Muslim, was permitted to ride on his cab. He donated Mulla Sa’d al-Dīn b. Bayān Khwāja was born in village Qomārāv of the Tobol’sk governorate on 13 January 1844. He studied in Tārā with the same damullā Raḥmat Allāh b. Mulla Yusuf Ṭanbāwī. He received a license (ukaz) in [18]71 and is currently teaching and carrying out Imamat in the village of Qullār of the Kūrāʾskī volost of the Tobol’sk governorate. He is alive. ʿAbd al-Khāliq b. Ṣhārāf is in the village of Bīk in the Wāghāy volost of the Tobol’sk governorate. ʿAbd Allāh b. Raḥīm Qūl b. Avmāk is in village Qomārāv of the Tobol’sk district of Tobol’sk governorate. There is no register with his birth data. He studied in the school Mīr ʿArab with Ishān Niyyāz Qūl Ṭurkmānī ḥāḍrat. He accepted ṣarīqa from the hands of great masters. After his return to Qomārāv he was busy with teaching. He went to visit (ziyārāt) the sacred tombs in China and saw either in a dream or during muraqqa’bā Khwāja-ṣī Bahāʾ al-Dīn ḥāḍrat, who hold his right hand and said: “You do not have a permission to go back.” I have heard this from his companions and much later I have also seen his letters. I do not know who possesses them now.

Mulla Fakhr al-Dīn b. Yāʾlīqāsh was in the village Wāghāy of the Tobol’sk district of Tobol’sk governorate. There is not register with his date of birth, but he studied for several years in the village Mīrāʾīm Qūlār of the Tobol’sk district of Tobol’sk governorate at the school of Mulla Sābānṣī b. Yār Muḥammad. Later, in the times of Muftī ʿAbd al-Wāḥid he received a license (ukaz). During fifty years he was an Imam in the village of Wāghāy. He died on 25 May 1895, when he was 88 years old and was buried in the Wāghāy village. Mulla Nuʿmān b. Tulū Muḥammad was in the village of Qızīl Bāy of the Tobol’sk district of Tobol’sk governorate. There is not register with his birth date, but he went to Qāzān and studied in Qīshqār with damullā Ismāʾīl b. Mūṣā. Then he served as a teacher, Imam and akhūnd for several years. He died on 20 December 1892 and was buried on the cemetery of the village Qızīl Bāy.

Muḥammadī b. Qāsim was in the village Yūrshāq the Tobol’sk district of Tobol’sk governorate. His date of birth is also unknown, but he went to Qāzān and studied in Qaṣqar with ʿAbd Allāh b. Yāḥyā al-Charūṣī ḥāḍrat. He was among five oldest students. After that he carried out and taught for several years in the village of Yūrshāq. He died on 10 November 1869, when he was 58 years old and was buried in the village of Yūrshāq.

Mulla Abū Saʿīd b. Awwās Baqī was born in the village Ishāy of the Tobol’sk district of Tobol’sk governorate on 2 February 1866. He went to Qāzān and studied for eight years in the Qaṣqar school with damullā Ismāʾīl b. Mūṣā ḥāḍrat. Then he returned back to the Tobol’sk governorate and now he is an Imam and teacher in this city [Tobol’sk].

This was written on the basis of research and analysis by Muʿtaṣīm b. Bilāl b. Niyyāz b. Raḥīm Qūl b. Avmāk, an Imam and akhūnd of Qomārāv. On 1 September [18]95 I have finished my research” [8, ff. 2ab]. to Imams and teachers thirty thousand Rubles in cash and placed it as a charitable endowment. Now scholars are still living on this money. He left four sons and three daughters. His elderly son ‘Abd al-Fattāḥ b. Niyyāz Ayṭīkīn was a well-educated man. He possessed a state suit (mundir) and a medal (orden). The second son, Raḥmat Allāh b. Niyyāz Ayṭīkīn⁷⁵, has recently opened an Uspenskii paper fabric. The third son Naṣir al-Dīn b. Niyyāz Aydiḳīn for a while used to have shipping industry on the Irtysh River. Later he visited famous European cities in France and Switzerland. In 1880 he went to hajj and then died in Tara, when he was fifty three years old, in June 1894. He left two sons.

⁷⁵ | See his photographic portrait in figure 1 attached to this article.
Figure 1. A photographic portrait of Raḥmat Allāh b. Niyyāz Aytīkīn taken in 1905. From the private archive of F.T-A. Valeev (Kazan’).
Figure 2. A collective portrait of the Aitikin family taken in the early 20th century. From the private archive of F.T.-A. Valeev (Kazan’)

Alfrid K. Bustanov | ‘Abd al-Rashīd Ibrāhīm’s Biographical Dictionary on Siberian Islamic... 73
Figure 3. An astrolabe of Dawlat Bāqī b. ‘Alī Aṣgar, Isfahan, 17th century. Now preserved at the Tobol’sk State Historical and Architectural Museum, no. 16501. The photo is taken by Sergei Zhdanovskii.
Literature:

12. Fâkhreddin Rizaeddin, Asar. 3 hâm 4 tomnaar (Kazan: Rukhanniat, 2010).
14. Fâkhreddin Rizaeddin, Asar, 2 tom (Kazan: Rukhiiat, 2009)
Словарь биографий мусульманских ученых Сибири, составленный ‘Абд ар-Рашидом Ибрахимом

Аннотация: В статье представлены факсимиле и комментированные английские переводы двух версий сборника биографий мусульманских ученых Сибири. Этот труд был написан ‘Абд ар-Рашидом Ибрахимом (Ибрагимовым), и заслуживает серьезного внимания ученых, поскольку открывает для нас мир интеллектуальной жизни мусульман Западной Сибири, практически неизвестный до сих пор. Источники предоставляют нам информацию о местных богословах, работавших в XVIII–XIX вв., об их интересах, образовании, социальных связях и спорах на религиозные темы. Все это позволяет говорить о довольном развитом исламском дискурсе в Западной Сибири того времени.

Ключевые слова: ‘Абд ар-Рашид Ибрахим, биографии исламских ученых, исламский дискурс, ислам в Сибири, ислам в России, сибирские татары, татарская рукописная традиция, Риза ад-Дин б. Фахр ад-Дин.

Литература:

14. Fakhreddin Rizaeddin, Asar, 2 tom (Kazan: Rukhiiat, 2009)
16. G. Ibrahimov, Tüürjemäi hülëem iaki Bashyma kilgännür (Kazan: Iman, 2001)