Dankwoord
Writing a dissertation is probably the most intense experience one can have - including many ups, many downs and many learning moments. Thankfully, I did not have to face this journey alone.

First, Jens, with you, I learned psychological research from scratch. From you I heard my first social psychology lecture, I did my first study in the lab under your supervision, and look where we are today: We did it! You supported me in every possible way during the past years. Your knowledge, experience, and creativity surprised and challenged me, still to this day. But, you were not only a great “chefje” but also became a friend. I hope that our friendship will extend beyond this project.

Second, Nils, when you joined the University of Amsterdam you took on this project without doubt or hesitation. From day one, you critically and constructively left your own footprint on the research we present in this dissertation. Your wit, intelligence, and kindness impressed me every day. Thank you for all the discussions, help, and advice. I would have not been able to do this without you.

Next, everyone at the UvA who supported me along the way and made it fun to come to work: Janina, Marleen, and Lottie - the SoCo-girls - it was wonderful to be able to get to know and work with you. My office roomies over the years Suzanne, Anja, and Evert-Jan, thank you for the countless informal discussions for professional as well as personal support. Also Job, Bastiaan, Kai, Aafje, Sanne (my personal Dutch coach), Ran, Ana, Iris, Elise, Hannah, Michael, Daniela, Juliane, as well as of course Agneta, Joop, Gerben, Bertjan, Mark and, last but not least those who keep everything running, Karin and Ho Jung. And of course, Tila, Aukje, Maarten, and Wilhelm - thank you all for being such wonderful colleagues.

In Amsterdam, life was not always easy, but some people made it some of the best years I’ve had. My long-term roommate Alberto - thanks to you I know more about wine, food, and soccer than I ever thought was possible. Thanks for many legendary nights of dinner, conversations, and movies in our apartment. I could always count on you and hope that we will be friends for a long time to come. Also Volker, Severine, and Liz, you are crazy, fun, and kind - thank you for being like that.

Whenever I needed to get out of Amsterdam, there were wonderful places in Germany that I could go to and feel at home. To all my friends from Düsseldorf and beyond - Constanze, Susan, Alex, Maria, Timi, Marco, Lotta, Evelyn, Nadine, Max, Conny, Nora, and Manuel - I feel like the luckiest person in the world to have friends like you for more than 20 years now.
To my paranimfjes Nikki and Markus. Nikki, besides being the most amazing roomie, you are one of my best friends. You taught me that academia (and conferences in particular) is not only work, but actually a lot of fun! I am very proud to know you and hope that as old wrinkly grandmas we will sit together on your vineyard with a glass of wine. Markus, Mausi, what can I say. For the past eight years you were like an anchor professionally as well as personally. I could always count on you for advice, support, and a good cup of German coffee. Without you, life would not be the same. You are a great person and enrich my life. Thank you both for your encouragement and for being my friends.

Carlos, you believed in me and supported me during the hardest part of this dissertation. You gave me not only the strength to bring this to the end, but also the courage to look forward and realize all the things that I could do. There are no words for how much you mean to me. You make me very happy - thank you.

Last, I am most grateful to my family. I cannot image a day without you. You always supported my dreams without doubt or hesitation. Thanks to your unconditional love and support, I became the person I am today. None of this would be possible without you. Mama, Papa, and Linda - thank you for not only being my family but also my best friends.
