Policy discourses and multi-scalar interactions in curriculum development: Institutionalizing and translating ethnicity/race issues in Brazilian education

Soeterik, I.M.

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.

UvA-DARE is a service provided by the library of the University of Amsterdam (http://dare.uva.nl)
AKNOWLEDGEMENTS

With the “birth” of this manuscript, the time has come for me to thank many people for their critical contributions, patience and practical (and mental!) support during the long delivery process.

First of all, I would like to express my gratitude to all those people who in the context of this research so openheartedly shared their ideas, beliefs and concerns about the issue of ethnicity/race and education in Brazil. Even considering that many accounts were not included in a direct form in this book, I should emphasize that they very much contributed to the process of completing the puzzle.

I would also like to thank my promoters and co-promoters for their critical reading and feedback during the various phases of the project, not least my “daily supervisor” and dear colleague Toni Verger – to me a great example of a critical active scholar. It has always been very inspiring to exchange ideas with you about the content of the project. In the initial phase you helped me find the first “tracks” and in the last phase it was you who sat next to me when critically looking back at what I eventually made out of it. Thank you very much! Secondly, my “daily supervisor” in Brazil, dear Professor Renato Emerson. My exchanges with you and other colleagues from the research group Geography, Race Relations and Social Movements at the State University of Rio de Janeiro kept me connected to the context I was researching. In São Gonçalo, in the monthly Saturday afternoon meeting with teachers, students and researchers, I was constantly reminded of the relevance and urgency of the questions we are working on. Also, your critical geographical insight into social phenomena has been essential to the development of this work. Muitíssimo obrigada!!! I hope we will continue our projects together – despite being overseas now.

Thirdly, I would like to thank our special professor and friend Xavier Bonal for his interest in my project. You have been very supportive to me since I came back to Amsterdam and faced the solitary work of the last writing phase. Last, but certainly not least, I must thank my first promoter, Isa Baud. I would like to thank you very much for the opportunity to work on this project at the University of Amsterdam and the academic guidance you patiently provided me with in the various phases. I would also like to express thanks to the jury members of my PhD committee for taking the time to read and comment on my work.

During these years, I have felt supported and inspired by various colleagues linked to the Education and International Development research group: Graciëlla Paillet, Margriet Poppema, Mario Novelli, Mieke Lopes Cardozo, Hülya Kosar-Altinyelken, Magali Chelpi and Sanne van der Kaaij. I am also grateful to other colleagues of the Governance and Inclusive development group and the GPIO secretariat for their exchanges and support. In addition, I want to thank my direct colleagues and students now at the university teacher training institute at the University of Amsterdam, who are currently helping me build a bridge between what I have done “there” and what is so urgent to work on in education “here” in Amsterdam. I would especially like to mention Fadie Hanna; thanks for your critical reflections and exchanges!

A word of thanks should also go to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, specifically its Education and Research Division (DSO/OO), for financing the education and development IS Académie project in the context of which this study was conducted.
I received support in time-consuming work such as transcribing, language editing and formatting from various people. I would especially like to mention Diego França and Gabriel Siqueira, who also participated in the field when collecting data with hundreds of pupils at the school. I also thank Frank van Kesteren and David Raats, who helped with the tough job of English editing. Moreover, many thanks to Marcel Heemskerk and Jorge Azevedo, who helped me with formatting the maps.

Although during this PhD process, I did not spend as much time with friends and family as I would have liked, the development of this thesis would never have been possible without the friendship, love, trust and support I received from them, both in Brazil and in the Netherlands. I would especially like to mention five people.

My father, Han Soeterik, a critical thinker working for years on issues related to education and development. You were the first to read a version of the complete manuscript – as always your feedback has been very valuable. I thank you for instigating my interest in education, development and social justice, back in my early years. Above all, once again, I am grateful for the moral support and trust in me you frequently express.

My mother, Mia Groenenberg. Without your help and support, this would have been unthinkable! In Brazil and here in Amsterdam, you have been there helping out at various moments in various ways. From the first nights of our newborn babies and babysitting to checking the list of acronyms. Heel, heel erg bedankt!

Máximo. I did it, only because we managed. There is a thesis, but also two kids, two jobs, two continents. It was your trust and patience that gave me paz to work on this project. I know that you are at least as happy as I am now you finally have this book in your hands! I hope we will enjoy this achievement together and many others to come.

Tiago and Ruben – In these last seven years, every day you have reminded me how quickly life develops and how important it is to not lose contact with the here and now. Finally… the time has come for a more “playful” mind and even more moments full of laughter and wondering.