Traquetos : Colombians involved in the cocaine business in the Netherlands
Zaitch, D.

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgements

It has often been claimed that writing a Ph.D. thesis is an extremely solitary enterprise and traumatic experience. While it may indeed have had some detrimental effects, conducting this research gave me a great opportunity to make new friends, travel abroad and learn many things from and about other people. Most of the time it was fun, and I never felt alone.

I am indebted to many people who helped me in this enterprise in all possible ways. First and foremost, I would like to thank my supervisor Frank Bovenkerk, who enthusiastically supported me through the whole process. He convinced me to undergo the ethnographic experience and always had confidence in me, improving my skills and boosting my self-confidence. He helped me in practical matters, taught me some 'tricks' and carefully read all my texts. More importantly, he encouraged my intellectual freedom and critical spirit.

The Amsterdam School for Social Science Research offered the ideal environment to carry out this research. It was an excellent idea to stay close to the School's anthropologists. I tried to learn everything I could from Anton Blok, who gave me much useful advice and became a close critical reader of my work during my stay at the School. I would also like to thank all participants of the Anthropologists' Club for sharing their 'field' experiences with me. I express my gratitude also to the members of the VOC Club on classical readings: our anarchical meetings remain as a fruitful source of inspiration. The managerial staff of the School was always ready to help me: my thanks to Anneke, Annelies, Hans, José, Miriam and Teun.

Further, I profited from the careful comments and critical remarks made by several people along the writing process. I am grateful to Peter Boomgaard, Matthijs van den Bos, Remco Ensel, Frank van Gemert, Roy Gigengack Johan Heilbron, Ferdinand de Jong, Marc van der Meer, Mattijs van de Port, Gerda van Roozendaal, Marion van San, Kees Schuyt, Margaret Sleeboom, Oskar Verkkaik and Sikko Visscher for their notes, observations and intellectual companionship.

In the Netherlands, many people close to the topic encouraged me greatly and generously helped me to find my way during fieldwork. My thanks go especially to Janine Janssen, Dirk Korf, Liduine Zumpolle and Martin Jelsma. I am deeply grateful to 'Padre Theo' from Casa Migrante, whose militancy for the Latino community in Amsterdam is an example. He helped me in several ways, but more importantly, he encouraged me to break the boundaries between scholar aspirations and social action. Furthermore, I thank Toos, Jesús and Anita for their support: they made my involvement in Casa Migrante an enjoyable experience. As I also volunteered in the Colombia Komitee Nederland, I wish to express my gratitude to Ans, Joaquín, Pilar and Rommel.

This research could not have been possible without the help of many Colombians and their families who told me their stories and shared with me many public secrets. For those who became good friends in the Netherlands (they know who they are), I express my commitment to our friendship.

I will never forget the amount of hospitality and generosity I experienced during my visits to Colombia. Friends and colleagues offered me accommodation, food, protection, guidance and advice. They eagerly told me most of what I know about their country, opened the doors of their institutions and organised all sorts of things for me. Moreover, they repeatedly invited me to share with them, formally or informally, my own work. My special gratitude goes to Maribel Lagos and her family from Cali, and to Germán Silva from Bogotá: they were my main pillars in both cities. Furthermore, I wish to heartily thank Germán
Burgos, Jaime Escobar, Ana María Pérez Gómez and her family, Marcela Márquez and the people from Enlace, Alexander Montoya, Angela Narváez, Miguel Rujana, Alonso Salazar, Jaime Valencia and his family, Gildardo Vanegas, Alejandro Vargas, and the families Torres, Reyes and Rodríguez for their friendship and support.

From other places in Europe, many people influenced me enormously. Roberto Bergalli, my great teacher and mentor, gave me the weapons and the strength to go further in my endeavour. He encouraged me to think critically about crime and punishment. Teachers, friends and colleagues, especially in Spain and England, read and corrected my texts, invited me to conferences and gave me their expertise and friendship. In this regard, I am indebted to Xavier Arana, Francesc Barata, Phil Carney, Valerie Jones, Pierre Kopp, John Lea, Oriol Romaní, Amadeu Recasens, Vincenzo Ruggiero, Ramiro Sagarduy and Jock Young.

I would like to express my gratitude to Henk van de Bunt, who gave me his crucial support during the final stage of writing the manuscript. I also want to thank my paramimfen Reinhiilde König and René van Swaaningen for their friendship, their organisational support and their help with the Dutch summary. The same goes for Joanna Swabe, who carefully read the manuscript and corrected my poor Spanglish. Martín Zaitch and Ana Audivert designed the cover, for which I am grateful. Gudrun has supported me stoically throughout the heaviest period of writing. Her love gave me serenity and strength. Finally, I owe my parents my passion for knowledge and my striving for free thought.
To the... many people... the topic... greatly and... helped me... My thanks... especially... Iam deeply... the... relational work... More... to break... Furthermore... I also... to the... I wish to express... The... the help... many Colombians... their director... For those...... I express... I am... during my... and openness... They... of their... Moreover, they... they... My special... Geovana Silva... They were... thank...