

UvA-DARE (Digital Academic Repository)

Sum of all knowledge: Wikipedia and the encyclopedic urge

Salor, F.E.

Link to publication

Citation for published version (APA):

Salor, F. E. (2012). Sum of all knowledge: Wikipedia and the encyclopedic urge

General rights

It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations

If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: <http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact>, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.

Acknowledgements

Any project, regardless of merit or consequence, that spans four years is bound to accumulate dependencies. This thesis could not have been realized without the generous support of the Amsterdam School for Cultural Analysis and its managing director, Eloe Kingma.

Having worked together for six years, it would not be an overstatement to credit almost every positive development in my academic life in Amsterdam in some way to the two people who are credited as the supervisors to this project. Prof. Dr. Mireille Rosello immediately became the very model of a scholar for me during the first course in my initial master's degree and her inquisitive, incisive and subtle approach to all matters continued to set the standard to which I aspired to achieve in all my work. Despite me entering almost all our thesis meetings with looming uncertainties and doubts, she has always managed to put me on the right track with just one or two questions of surprising brevity, disarming simplicity and yet, pinpoint accuracy.

Even during my first weeks in Amsterdam, Dr. Joyce Goggin was there to support my slightly off-kilter interests among the group and ever since then she has been my constant source of inspiration for applying myself in a diversity of interests with open-mindedness and curiosity while expressing myself with clarity and verve. As the editor of my drafts, she has bared the brunt of all my struggles. Prof. Rosello and Dr. Goggin are the reason why I insist on anyone asking me advice about starting a PhD to “find a supervisor you admire and love to work with, the rest will sort itself out”.

A kindred spirit and a tireless conversationalist, Esra Almas gracefully served as my sounding board for ideas over the years and provided invaluable companionship. Thijs van den Berg, in addition to being the source of many a great conversation, kindly accepted to be the editor of the Dutch summary of the thesis.

Canan Marasligil transformed from being my girlfriend at the beginning of this project to being my wife at the end of it and has never yielded in her effort to make me a better thinker and to encourage me to explore the world in her incomparable way. Her drive and dedication always kept me on track and I will always be grateful for her ceaseless support and endurance for a hermetic PhD student repeatedly pestering her with quasi-interesting information and half-baked ideas.

Above all, my thanks and gratitude is for my parents, whose unwavering support took all imaginable forms over the years. While they always tried their best to ensure that I am always in a position to be able to achieve all I could aspire to, it was for their gentle and loving curiosity and genuine interest towards all my endeavors that I consider myself immeasurably lucky and blessed for.

This is for Gülbün and Tamer Salor.