Skepticism films: Knowing and doubting the world in contemporary cinema
Schmerheim, P.A.

Citation for published version (APA):
Schmerheim, P. A. (2013). Skepticism films: Knowing and doubting the world in contemporary cinema

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgements

This dissertation is the result of a long intellectual journey which took several sideways in the process of its making, not the least because, as John Lennon rightfully once sang, life has the habit of happening while the writer is busy making writing plans.

I would not have been able to complete it without the help of my friends and colleagues in Amsterdam, Bremen, Düsseldorf and other parts of the world. I especially thank the promoter of my dissertation, Josef Früchtl – not only for giving me the opportunity to pursue and finish my exotic skepticism films project under his auspices, but most of all for giving me inestimable advice, feedback on chapters and continuing inspiration from his own film-philosophical work and his exemplary presence as a teacher and philosopher in seminars, conferences and personal conversations.

The first one to blame for my year-long occupation with skepticism films is Olaf L. Müller, whose philosophy classes at the University of Göttingen incited my fascination for envatted brains and evil deceivers. Helmut Korte raised my interest in film analysis and encouraged my early project ideas. Peter Bloom, Melinda Szaloky, Charles Wolfe, and especially Edward Branigan helped me getting started while I was a visiting postgraduate student at the University of California, Santa Barbara (through a combined scholarship by the Fulbright Commission and the Education Abroad Program of the University of Göttingen and University of California). Thomas Elsaesser, Patricia Pisters, and Michael Wedel encouraged me to pursue the PhD at the University of Amsterdam.

The close-knit community of film-philosophy aficionados at the ASCA PhD seminar in “film and philosophy,” conducted by Thomas Elsaesser, Josef Früchtl, Christoph Lindner, and Patricia Pisters, inspired me tremendously. I benefited from the companionship of Pedram Dibazar, Pepita Hesselberth, Jay Hetrick, Martine Huvenne, Blandine Joret, Nur Ozgenalp, Paula Rodriguez, Maria Poulaki, and Eva Sancho Rodriguez. They showed me the meaning of film-philosophical passion and enriched my initially analytic-philosophical intuitions with a feeling for the vast landscape of philosopho-cultural reflection on cinema.

The completion of the manuscript was made possible by an ASCA PhD fellowship and the support of Robin Celikates, Eloë Kingma, Christoph Lindner, and Jantine van Gogh at ASCA, and the helpful souls at the UvA Philosophy Department. Tobias Kurwinkel, Eva Sancho Rodriguez, Daan Vermeulen, and Timotheus Vermeulen commented on earlier chapter drafts.

This dissertation would never have seen the light the without moral support of my friends and family: Gerhard Atts, Thania Dimitrakopoulou, Philip Ehlers, Fatime Görenekli, Clemens Grünwald, Bernd Gruschwitz, Annika Kurwinkel, Francesca Musiani, Azadeh Salati, Heiner Schwarz, and Attila Yurttas.
I especially thank Daan Vermeulen for being a wonderful friend and reserving me a spot on the sofa during my years-long commutes between Düsseldorf and Amsterdam. My biggest thanks go out to Tobias Kurwinkel and his family for being my best friend in good and bad times and a fellow traveler on the sometimes disorienting routes of academic life.

I dedicate this dissertation to the memory of my mother, Marion Christa Schmerheim, and my grandparents, Hildegard Schmerheim and Hermann Schmerheim, and I dedicate it to my godmother, Sigrid Schmerheim, who was and is always there.

Düsseldorf, September 8, 2013