This journey begun with endless twists and turns. I began and ended this academic process with Him to whom all glory and honour belongs. It all began when, in the midst of my academic uncertainties, I cried out to God and gave myself a good talking to and hung up a poster in my study room bearing the text ‘I will never give up and I will never fail, God be my helper’. Thankfully, my cry was heard and while involved in my usual community sensitisation activity in November 2007, I received a telephone call from Dr Kyereh Boateng about a wonderful PhD opportunity via the Tropenbos International Ghana programme. More blessings came my way when Mr Sam Nketiah (‘Uncle Sam’), the Director of Tropenbos International Ghana, informed me that ‘Prof. Dietz and Dr Mirjam Ros of the University of Amsterdam are going to be your promotor and co-promotor respectively’. A trip to the Netherlands to attend the CERES PhD training and to meet my supervisors took away any remaining uncertainties I had and turned my dreams into a reality. The result is that I did not undertake this journey alone and I would like to thank numerous people who were of immense support before and during my PhD.

I am profoundly grateful and indebted to three wonderful people who supervised and mentored me. They helped me make the most of my hidden potentials that enabled me to grow into my academic role thanks to their unique and complementary roles. I would sincerely like to thank my promotor Prof. Dr Ton Dietz for your excellent leadership role and insightful wisdom when it came to identifying missing pieces of puzzles and providing the space to find and complete the puzzle even during a lovely ‘hunter’s meal’ with your family. I really appreciated your words of praise on every chapter I submitted, your constructive and enriching suggestions during our meetings, as well as the time you spent in Ghana visiting my research site. Thank you very much for offering me the opportunity to do my PhD under your supervision and at the University of Amsterdam without even having met me. I am also very grateful to my co-promotor Dr Mirjam Ros-Tonen. I would like to take this opportunity to break all cultural protocols and call you Mirjam for the first time instead of ‘Doc’. As my daily supervisor, you became a pillar I could lean on and a friend as well as a mentor. You guided my steps especially in scientific writing and taught me the lesson that ‘Writing is deleting’. I have not really fully mastered that skill but I know I will in the near future. Not only did I enjoy your company when you visited my research sites on several occasions, I also enjoyed your guidance and constructive suggestions when writing my thesis. Your house became my home and that strengthened the relationship between our two families. I would therefore also like to take this opportunity to thank the entire Ros family – Wynand, Sanne and Stijn – for all their love and support. I am also really grateful to Dr Kyereh Boateng, my field advisor who guided me during the data collection process and who provided constructive comments regarding the progress of this study. I specifically want to thank him most sincerely for calling me to suggest that I undertake this PhD study.

I would also like to take this opportunity to thank the PhD committee members, Prof. Dr Isa Baud, Prof. Dr Bas Arts (who inspired me to use confrontation matrix during the Illegal or Incompatible seminar in Ghana), Prof. Dr René Boot (who taught me right from the beginning to blend theory with policy), Dr Maarten Bavinck (who inspired me to use interactive governance theory and gave me a copy of his book ‘Fish for Life’ as a suggestion for me to write ‘Forest for Life’) and Dr Kyereh Boateng for the time they invested in assessing this lengthy document.

Financial support for this research was provided by Tropenbos International through the Tropenbos International Ghana programme. I am hugely indebted to TBI staff, especially the Director, Prof. Dr René Boot and Hans Vellema, who made it possible for me to participate in forestry programmes both at home and abroad. Words cannot express my profound gratitude to TBI Ghana for both financial and logistical support, as well as for providing a platform to listen and provide rich inputs for my research proposal and findings. I sincerely want to thank Mr Samuel Nketiah, the Director, and Olivia – what would I have done without your administrative efficiency? I wish I had the space to mention the names of the rest of the staff and have a personal word for each of them, but I say God richly blesses all of you for your diverse forms of support. I especially want to thank Dr Victor Agyeman, Director of the Forestry Research Institute of Ghana (FORIG), for his immense contribution with regard to the clarification of law technicalities in Chapter 11 of this thesis and to Dr Osofo Acquaah and Dr C. Marfo of Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology (KNUST), Dr. Cobbinah, Dr Sekyere and Dr Oteng-Amoako (FORIG) for showing a regular interest in the study progress. My sincere thanks are also due to NUFFIC for sponsoring me to attend the ‘Competing claims on natural resources – professional qualities for conflict management in NRM towards sustainable development’ course organised by Centre for Development Innovation in 2011. I am grateful to Nico and Cora as well as the other lecturers, for introducing me to the complexity and diversity of natural resource management which gave me a much better understanding of forest conflicts. I also want to thank the European Cooperation in Science and Technology (COST) and TBI for providing the necessary finances to enable me to participate in the post–graduate course in REDD+ Science +Governance: Opportunities and challenges in Wageningen in April 2012.

What would I have done without the support and companionship of my PhD colleague Thomas Insaidoo? Tom, thanks a lot for all your support and the friendship and knowledge we shared in Ghana and in the Netherlands. I would also like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to all the MSc students in International Development Studies at the University of Amsterdam with whom I worked over the years, namely Jennie, Andy, Jochem, Lucien, Jurre, Maryke, Becky and José Luis. I am also very grateful to the law students Larbi Esther, Yankson Joseph, Annang Edwin Sarfo, Koomson Faustina Abeka and Boakye Kwabena Akyeampong of KNUST for providing data for Chapter 11. I am also immensely grateful to Matilda Afriyie, Yaw Owusu, Joseph Mensa, Clement Owusu and Adda, Agyapong, Gaise for supporting me in my field data collection.

I would also like to take this opportunity to thank all those who gave up their time and space for me to tap into their rich knowledge which resulted in this thesis. First, I would like to thank the inhabitants of Kyekyerewere, Kunsu-Nyamebekyere No. 3, Chir rayso and Awisasu communities. Second, I am profoundly grateful to the FSD staff at Nkawie Forest District and all the five regions in the high forest zone especially Mr Dery, Mr Dickson and Mr Emmanuel Yeboah. Third, I would like to thank officials of the Forestry Commission, especially Mr Obiaw, Mr Alex Asare, Mr and Mrs Fumey–Nassah, Mrs. Mercy O. Ansah, Mrs. Edith Abreuquah, K.K. Ghartey (Retired), Kas
Yirenkyi (retired), Richard Ninnoni, Dr Ben Donkor, Evelyn Asante-Yeboah, David Baidoo, Akpalu, Ian Awuah, Ohene-Gyan, Michael Pentsil, Chris Beeko and Joe Appiah. Fourth, I would like to thank Joseph Osiakwan and Macdana Yunus of the Ministry of Lands and Natural Resources (MLNR), Dr Abeney and Mr. J.G.K. Owusu (retired) of the Faculty of Renewable Natural Resources (KNUST), Mr James Parker of TBI Ghana, Michael Kwaku of INBAR and His Honour Judge Noble Nkrumah of Nkawie Circuit Court. Finally I would like to express my gratitude to institutions such as the Ghana Timber Association (GTA), the Ministry of Food and Agriculture, the Land Valuation Division of MLNR, the Dutch Embassy, GTZ, IUCN, the World Bank, the Rural Development and Youth Association, the African Development Bank, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Forestry Research Institute of Ghana, the National Forestry Forum and the Community Resource Management Area (CREMA).

I am also sincerely grateful to all my colleagues at the 2008 CERES PhD training cohort for their immense support and friendship. I would also like to express my appreciation to the former deputy director of CERES, Dr Ab van Eldijk for encouraging me when I was downhearted after the presentation of my research proposal at CERES PhD training. During my time at AMIDSt (now AISSR), I greatly valued the interaction with my fellow PhD researchers, especially Dr Marloes Kraan, Dr Koen Kusters, Dr Benson Mulemi, Iris Monnereau, Aenne Post, Edith van Ewijk and Dr Emmanuel Nyankweli. I would also like to thank all the members of the Governance and Inclusive Development group of AISSR for their immense support and the platform they provided me to give presentations as well as share the progress of my research. I am sincerely thankful to Gert van der Meer, Babara Lawa, Marianne van Heelsbergen, Guida Morães e Castro Ermida and Puikang Chan for all the financial and logistical support. Puikang and Mirjam, thanks too for your help in the final layout of this thesis. To Koen and Edith, my dear paranymphs, I would like to say bravo for being with me during the organisation of, and for providing support during, the PhD ceremony.

I would like to express my appreciation for the support of the people I call my peer reviewers – Dr Nana Sarfo Agyemang Derkyi, John Amonoor, Dr Joe Quansah, Dr Bernard Nsiah, Yaw Atuahene Nyako, Kwame Appiah Owusu and Osei Tutu. I am also grateful to Howard Turner for his English language editing of this thesis.

I am also grateful to Dr Adu-Arko and family, Dr Opoku-Ameyaw and family, Dr Opare and family, and the Dwumah, Wilson Owusu, Opoku-Agyemang, Derkyi and Ameyaw families for their prayers and support. My stay in the Netherlands would not have been complete without the love and support of my brother-in-law Stephen Derkyi and family and the congregation of Wesley Methodist Church, Amsterdam. I will never forget friends like Charity, Adomako and Sally for their support and encouragement in diverse ways.

My family gave me the strength and inspired to carry on and not give up. The support I received from my husband Nana Sarfo Agyemang Derkyi, despite him being very busy with his own PhD is immeasurable. You have taught me so much, share in my happiness and provide a shoulder to cry on when things are not going well. I am so grateful to you for your positive advices and comments and for taking care of things when I was away from Ghana for academic purposes.

‘Mummy is not at home’ is not a statement every child wants to hear. For four years, my children Nana Osei Assibey Derkyi, Nana Kwaku Baah Derkyi and Maame Abena Konama Derkyi have had to cope with my absence when I was in the field or in the Netherlands. I would like to thank you dear children for always being there for me. I am also profoundly thankful to my late father, Kofi Akyeampong Ameyaw, who would have been so proud and joyful on this happy day. I would also like to thank my only sister Olivia as well for your prayers and support. Last, but not least, I would like to say that I am eternally grateful to my dear mum, Martha Ameyaw, for your immense support and for always taking care of my family during my absence.
