Acknowledgements

I would like to thank Leonardo Quaresima and Simone Venturini who supported this research project from its very beginnings at the University of Udine and the film restoration laboratory La Camera Ottica. I would also like to thank all my colleagues at the University of Udine for the continuous exchange of views during and outside of work, and in particular Alice Autelitano, Elena Biserna, Alessandro Bordini, Claudia D’Alonzo, Stefania Giovenco, Andrea Mariani, Mirco Santi, and Martina Pizzamiglio.

I am grateful for the opportunity to develop my research that was provided to me by the joint doctorate with the University of Amsterdam under the supervision of Julia Noordegraaf and Giovanna Fossati. I thank them for all the productive discussions and stimulating comments, which substantially shaped the raw material that takes its final form in this book.

I owe special thanks to Hotze Mulder for supporting me in the procedural and bureaucratic journey of the joint doctorate process at the University of Amsterdam.

I would like to thank the Deutsche Kinamthek, Martin Körber, and Dirk Förstner for their collaboration on the Tonbilder restoration project. I also want to thank the Deutscher Akademischer Austausch Dienst and the Ateneo Italo-Tedesco for their financial support in this collaboration. The analysis of this project was enhanced by the work of the employees at the restoration department of Arri Film & TV Munich, who I also want to thank.

Special thanks go to Daniela Currò for sharing her knowledge and expertise during my internship at the Haghefilm Foundation. I would like to thank the employees of the Haghefilm Lab and of the EYE Film Institute who helped me understand not only the technological aspects but also the social dynamics of the preservation process. I thank Evangelina Loguercio for her friendly presence during my stays in Amsterdam.
I would like to thank the dissertation referees Reto Kromer and Federico Pierotti for reading the first draft of the dissertation and providing precious comments.

For the help with translation issues I thank Caylin Smith, Laura Mongillo, and Claudy op den Kamp.

Most importantly, I owe my deepest thanks to my parents, Ferdinando and Teresa, for their unwavering and unconditional support. I thank my nephews Ivan, Kristian, and Bryan for every hug they give me when I come back. I thank my close friends, and particularly Annavittoria, Chiara, and Elisa, for proving that, despite all of the changes in our lives, there are things that endure over the years, and moments worth remembering. My final thanks are dedicated to my companion who shared quiet songs, eastern walks, decayed films, curated meals, and crowds of thoughts with me during the many months of writing.
