Pathophysiology of stress-induced visceral hypersensitivity
Stanisor, O.I.

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Contents

INTRODUCTION ........................................................................................................................................... 7
Essential role for TRPV1 in stress-induced (mast cell-dependent) colonic hypersensitivity in maternally separated rats........................................................................................................................................... 14
Peripheral α-helical CRF (9-41) does not reverse stress-induced mast cell dependent visceral hypersensitivity in maternally-separated rats........................................................................................................................................... 41
Stress-induced visceral hypersensitivity in maternally separated rats can be reversed by peripherally restricted histamine-1-receptor antagonists ........................................................................................................................................... 63
Susceptibility to stress induced visceral hypersensitivity in maternally separated rats is transferred across generations ........................................................................................................................................... 79
SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS ................................................................................................................ 99
SAMENVATTING EN CONCLUSIES ........................................................................................................ 106
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS ............................................................................................................................ 113