Acknowledgments

This thesis would not have come to fruition without the advice and support I’ve received during my studies. Firstly I thank the Water Authority (Hoogheemraadschap Hollands Noorderkwartier) and Stichting Waterproef for funding my PhD. I thank Gert van Ee, Emile Nat, Ron van Leuken and Herman van Dam. You were the sounding boards for many of my ideas and offered good insights, local knowledge and helped me to grow by challenging me. I extend my gratitude to my committee members, Patrick Armitage, Karsten Kalbittz, Jos Verhoeven, Wilco Verberk and Piet Verdonschat – thank you for being my committee and taking the time to critique my work, I look forward to the defence. To my promotor, Wim – your patience and good nature were always appreciated. You frequently offered me pearls of wisdom. There were times you gave me clarity and at other times you kept me guessing. To my co-promotor, Harm – your spontaneous style and easy-going attitude challenged my sensibilities, I really enjoyed problem solving with you and developing ideas together. You taught me a lot and I couldn’t have wished for a better supervisor. Arie – thanks for inspiring me to go further with my work, you frequently came up with great ideas and your astute attention to detail didn’t go amiss either. To Michiel – you were my first contact at AEE and your energy and boisterous laughter made a great impression on me! Thank you for introducing me to the group and offering kind words and encouragement when I needed to hear them. Helen – I remember celebrating together the day I was appointed to the PhD position. Your gentle way and warm smile brightens my day.

One of the wonderful things about the whole PhD project was the great friends I’ve made along the way. To my colleagues, Sascha, Susanne, Ciska, Bram, Marino, Vesna, Ellard, Raül and Britt – I’m thankful to have such a fantastic group of friends to see me through the tough times and to celebrate the good ones, you made this PhD a colourful experience. We didn’t get the reputation of party department for nothing! Ale – it’s been a joy to share this experience with you. Discussing our work together was always insightful and I learnt a lot from you. Your charismatic nature and good humour helped me to find my way through the valley of (…)! To Judith – you are just starting your PhD journey, I wish you all the best for the future, I have the feeling that you will do a great job. To Coen – my good friend and ever helpful assistant, it was great fun working in the field together. You also stopped me from going crazy when everything seemed to go wrong, like that day at Naardermeer when the so called “waterproof” laptop drowned in the rain (yet again)? To Jasper – near the end of my project you gave me some very good advice, “take your time on the discussion and enjoy it” I followed 50% of that advice and enjoyed it. To Bas you reminded me that time spent drinking beer in the sun is time well spent. To Emiel – always busy yet always ready to help. Thank you for getting me on the road to using R. All the tuition you gave me and discussions we had about the data was not only helpful but enjoyable. To Chiara – you offered me and my students a lot of help. You took me under your wing when I was wading through mud samples. You taught me so much, not just about lipid extraction but also about patience and generosity. I wish you all the best for the road ahead and hope that soon you will have the time you deserve for yourself. To Joke – thank you for helping me out and your patience when things got broken. To Casper – the boat trips in the Weerribben and Naardemeer were a lot fun, despite the biting insects. Thanks for the boat trips and sharing your knowledge of wetland vegetation with me.

To my students Linda, Boris and Soraya – you were hard workers and really applied yourselves to your projects. At times you were left to your own devices, especially Soraya who started her internship shortly before I left to get married in New Zealand. Thank you all for your enthusiasm, hard work and what you taught me along the way, I wish you all the best for the road ahead. I thank Martin Meirink for his help with the extensive and convoluted HHNK datasets. To the team at Waterproof – there are so many of you who helped me during this project. I extend a special thanks to Mark, Casper, Annie, Willie, Frank, Angelique, Gerrit and (of course) Pim. Pim - when I began this project I had never identified invertebrates before, you familiarized me with the basics and gave me the push I needed to get started and soon I was addicted. At this point I would like to acknowledge all the small creatures that were sacrificed during my PhD. This work would not have been possible without the thousands who (unintentionally) gave their bodies to science. I also extend my gratitude to the Natuurmonumenten, especially Ed Zijp, Annemieke Ouwehand and Andre Timmer. Some of my fondest memories during this PhD were the times spent in the Wormer en Jisperveld and Naardermeer.

I save the last words of my acknowledgements for my family, to my Mum (Judy), Dad (Michael), Anisa, Jason, Liam, Jessica, Nan and June. One of the toughest things about doing this PhD was the time spent away from you and being so very far from home. I thank you all for giving me your blessing and believing in me. And to my husband Nigel – simply said I could never have done this without you, you gave me strength when I needed it most.
