

Notes on the Exhibition identifies the exhibition as a “curatorial composition.” By providing only the information required for viewers to appreciate the individual elements on display, and not an elaboration on the meaning of the show, the curator positions the exhibition as a whole to be addressed as a work of art with a life of its own.