Consumed by consumer culture? Advertising’s impact on children’s materialism and life satisfaction
Opree, S.J.

Citation for published version (APA):
Acknowledgements

The four years in which I’ve written this dissertation represent a period of personal and professional development. I sincerely thank my promotores Patti Valkenburg and Moniek Buijzen, and my co-promotor Eva Van Reijmersdal for their share in my growth. Patti, you have been a remarkable role model. Moniek, you continuously tested my limits, making me achieve so much more than I would have been capable of without you. Eva, even unaware at times, you provided me with much cherished hands-on advice.

The research in this dissertation was also inspired by other researchers from ‘our’ VIDI-team: Esther Rozendaal, Doeschka Anschutz, Simone de Droog, and Frans Folkvord. I’ve thoroughly enjoyed the (bi)weekly coffee meetings in which we discussed each other’s work. Thank you for your valuable input. The same goes for all other CcaM colleagues, my research assistants Laurens Jan de Lussanet de la Sablonière and Rhianne Hoek, the PhD club, and all of my former and current roommates.

The Amsterdam School of Communication Research has provided me with a top-notch learning environment, and so has the Ohio State University School of Communication. I hold much gratitude to Michael Slater, Andrew Hayes, Amy Nathanson, David Ewoldsen, and Brad Bushman for their excellent guidance during my visit. I must also mention Laura Willis, who has been an outstanding host. Thank you for many precious memories, including Thanksgiving at your parents’ house.

Much appreciation goes out to my parents, my sister, and my friends. You are a true blessing. Henny and Cees, I cannot express in words how grateful I am for all the support you have given me throughout my life. Thank you for being there, always and regardless. Heleen, not only do we share a warm childhood, we are now even more closely tied by an incredible journey to South Africa. Thank you for looking out for me both then and now. My friends, you know who you are and why I value you. This dissertation signifies just one phase of my life, may we share many more!

Of course, I would not have been able to complete this dissertation without my participants. For that reason, I would like to thank the children who took part in my studies via online panels or on site at De Ontdekking in Almere, Christelijk Basisschool Instituut Coolsm in Driebergen, De Kameleon in Maarssen, Openbare Basisschool de Winde in Nootdorp, Emmaus in Voorschoten, and G.J. van den Brinkschool in Wageningen. I am also grateful for the help of the teachers and principals who allowed me to collect data in their classrooms.

Last but not least, I want to thank the people who will play an important role during my defense. Agnes Nairn, Peter Nikken, Hans Beentjes, Jochen Peter, and Ed Tan, thank you for serving on my promotion committee and reading this manuscript. Finally, my paronymps Sanne Nikkelen and Jolanda Veldhuis. I admire you for your uplifting spirits. Regardless of the pressure you are under, you never lose your cool. Thank you for your positive support throughout my PhD period, and during my defense.