Visions of the future: imagining Islamic modernities in Indonesian Islamic-themed post-Suharto popular and visual culture

Schmidt, L.K.

Citation for published version (APA):
References

References

Hartley, John (1992) The politics of pictures: The creation of the public in the age of accessed 02.04.2014.

References

Pohl, Florian (2009) Islamic Education and the Public Sphere, Münster: Waxmann Verlag.

Rose, N. and P. Miller (1992) ‘Political power beyond the State: problematics of Rotenberg, Robert (2001) ‘Metropolitanism and the transformation of urban space in Indonesian Transnational Labor Migration’, Anthropological Quarterly, 77(3): 407-434.
and Muslims in the Media’, Sociology Compass, (1)2: 443-462.
Samuel, Raphael (1994) Theatres of Memory, vol. 1: Past and Present in Ramadan turn into Christmas’, Advances in Consumer Research, 34: 610–615.
Sen, Krishna, David Hill (2000) Media, Culture and Politics in Indonesia, Jakarta:
Equinox.
Schmidt, Leonie (2012) ‘Urban Islamic spectacles’: transforming the space of the shopping mall during Ramadan in Indonesia’, Inter-Asia Cultural Studies, 13(3): 384-407.
Schmidt, Volker H. (2006) ‘Multiple modernities or varieties of modernity?’ , Current Schröder, Kim, et.al. (2003) ‘Reception Research Toolbox’. In Researching Audiences: A Practical Guide to Methods in Media Audience Analysis, London:
Edward Arnold, 143-170.
Sen, Krishna, David Hill (2000) Media, Culture and Politics in Indonesia, Jakarta:
Equinox.
Charles Bazerman and Paul Prior (eds.) What writing does and how it does it: An introduction to analyzing texts and textual practices, Mawah, New Jersey:
Roundhouse Publishing.
national identity’. In Nancy Duncan (ed.) BodySpace: Destabilising Geographies Shils, Edward (1957) ‘Primordial, Personal, Sacred and Civil Ties’, British Journal of Sociology, 8(1): 130-145.

History, 75: 1117-1129.

Vatikiotis, Michael (2006) ‘In Indonesia, Islam loves democracy’, Institute of Southeast Asian Studies (Singapore) in collaboration with The New York Times. 06.02. 2006.

