The act of writing these last words of my PhD thesis resonates with the first track of the record on the cover: Here comes the sun! What a long and winding road it was. And somewhere down that road, I actually thought that I could finish a paper, have a baby, do a tour with my band, write another paper, run my own company, and be a good partner and father all at the same time within half a year or so. How much can you learn.

Brechtje, love of my life, thank you for your abiding persistence. Because of you and our children Dieuwertje en Boudewijn, it has become simple to make choices and focus on what is important in life. We did this together: we can be proud of it. Harvesting time!

Theo, I was already more than half way down in my PhD when you took over supervision. You managed to make me focus on the ball and run in the right direction. Your passes were sparse in the beginning, and I would miss in front of an open goal. But as we got more and more accustomed, you taught me how to position myself, approach the opponent and be creative while obeying the tactics, resulting in a number of brilliant goals. Your creativity in developing scientific ideas is impressive. I have enjoyed our close collaboration very much, and I want to thank you for backing me in the jobs at SightCorp and UvA, and for guiding me to our achievements in recent prestigious conferences and journals - that made it all worthwhile. I look forward to frequently bumping in to eachother in Maxwell, Erik’s and Alibaba.

Jan, what a pleasant surprise when you returned to the research group. It was a relief for me to be able to collaborate ‘in the mud’ with such a bright mind and kind man. We have meant a lot to each other in our work and the successful results thereof. That feels good.
Arnold, I will never forget our meetings - it has been a privilege. I sometimes describe you as the ‘Johan Cruijff’ of computer vision, which is thus both advantageous and disadvantageous. In my experience you have always valued the holistic Ivo Everts - this has given me strength at times when I needed it. Your secretary feels like a second home: thank you Virginie and Suna!

Roberto, we have spend a lot of hours in the same office together and we collaborated in virtually all possible ways: in the classroom, in academia, in industry, with family matters, at parties and numerous festivals. Uniquely good times! Nicu, you gave me the opportunity to do a PhD. I want to thank you for that, and for arranging everything a PhD student could ever dream of. The first years were certainly fun - focus came later. Thanks Thomas for saving chapter 2 :) and Sezer for our collaboration in chapter 3 - at least Eq. (3.3) made it to the cover :) Thanks Vlado for always being there for me. I could be sitting here with just pee-stains on my rug. Mom and dad, because of you I possess the perpetual self-confidence that has been needed for accomplishing this work. There have been times in which you were my only source of peace. And big thanks to all members and associates of the research group throughout the years for constructive and less constructive discussions in the office, at brouwerij ’t IJ, in the canteen, on the football pitch, at the tennis table or bowling lane (or any other arbitrary location, as long as The Big Lebowski is on the screen).
