Writing this part of the thesis is in some sense the hardest. How can I name all the people that I have been inspired by or who have motivated me? How can I name everyone who has made a lasting impression on me over the years? So many people have helped me throughout my PhD project, both as a scientist and as a human being. I will do my best to acknowledge you all:

First, let me thank the members of the committee for their time and dedication to reading the thesis and for their thoughts and scrutiny: Prof. dr. Edward de Haan, Prof. dr. Peter Hagoort, Prof. dr. Richard Ridderinkhof, Dr. Amir Amedi, and Dr. Julia Simner. A special thank you to Diane Pecher for stepping in for the defense ceremony. Dr. Simner, we will really miss having you here, but I am looking forward to catching up with you soon. Dr. Amedi, thank you for traveling from so far to be here, and I very much look forward to our collaboration.

A very special thank you to both my promotor, Prof. dr. Jaap Murre, and co-promotor, Dr. Romke Rouw, for all their years of hard work, dedication, inspiration, and advice (not always on research either!). I think that I was very lucky to have two brilliant, thoughtful, caring and involved supervisors. You both were always extremely supportive of my PhD project, but also of all my other academic activities, such as my continued education and non-academic involvements (most notably, the art exhibitions and business initiatives).

Romke, I can’t thank you enough for taking a chance all those years ago on an eager master student who was ‘obsessed with synesthesia.’ Without your recognition of my motivation and abilities, I would not be where I am today. You’ve been not just a great supervisor, but also a very good friend (e.g. the time your hotel phone rang just before 7 AM and it was your lost and stressed out PhD student who had just landed in Israel after a red-eye flight and had nowhere to rest before the conference started. You greeted me with a big smile on your face, you lent me your room and made me a coffee too!). I always enjoy meeting with you, brainstorming on new ideas and chatting about about non-work related things as well. (Here is a good place to say thanks again for the uncountable number of times you bought me coffee and lunch!) We both share a passion for coffee (wait, you thought I was going to say synesthesia?), but also for traveling, especially to exotic and remote places, and I think you are really courageous in that. You are an inspiring person for so many reasons. Luckily, we will remain colleagues for a while longer, and if I would have it my way, always. I’m glad that the day has not yet come to say goodbye. No matter where I end up in the future, I’m sure that we will not only keep collaborating on research, but also remain good friends.

Jaap, it would be impossible to summarize of all the knowledge I’ve gained from you over the years. Thank you for giving me the opportunity to prove that I was the right person for the job. Five years ago, I remember sitting down at my new desk, with a blank text file, trying to figure out how to make a box in HTML and thinking: how am I going to make a whole battery of online tests and do all of the behavioral and MRI data collection and analysis?! I learned SO much about programming, but most importantly about how to be a good scientist. You gave me the opportunity to do new and exciting experiments that were not originally part of the project and which ended up being the majority of my thesis. Thank you for all the trust and foresight and for always being understanding and flexible. I’ve always appreciated the fact that we both share a mathematical background, and you never cease to amaze me with your knowledge of... the world: in science, psychology, math, programming, business, history, culture and even perfumery! Your English is, by the way, most definitely better than mine.

I must give a very special thank you to Dr. Steven Scholte, who has had a substantial role in the research in this thesis. Steven, thanks for being such a supportive role here at the UvA, not just for me, but for our entire extended group. Since I came to Amsterdam, you have been my teacher, supervisor, boss, co-author and colleague. I’m proud to add ‘friend’ to this list. You have really been an essential part of my development as a scientist. Even with your endlessly busy schedule, you always find the time to help me out. I am extremely grateful for both the knowledge and consideration that you’ve given me.

Here is perhaps a good place to say that I feel like the luckiest person in the world, because I love my colleagues so much. I couldn’t imagine a better place to work that in Brain & Cognition (B&C). It is quite possibly the best place to work in the world. That is not to say that our jobs are easy! But working with such wonderful people makes doing a hard job actually enjoyable and encouraging. So I think the entire department should be acknowledged for being open, encouraging, helpful and inspiring… To ALL of B&C, a big: THANK YOU FOR ALL OF THE SUPPORT! A special thanks to my wonderful roommates over the last couple of years who have all been endless sources of patience, support, and advice: Anouk, Heleen F., Jessika and Julia, and Martijn. Thanks to everyone who has helped me with conceptual, methodological, and analytical advice, namely (in alphabetical order!) André, Andries, Annelinde, David, Emoke, Heleen S., Ilja, Irene, Iris, Johannes, Joram, Lotte, Marlies, Mike, Niels, Reneé, Roy, Sara, Simon, Tomas, Yair and all of the BBMers!! Thank you, Nick, for all the help with programming, especially in the first years. Thank you, Annette de Groot, for your confidence in me throughout the years. Thank you, Hubert and Anna, for all your time, help and advice. Manon, thank you for all your help with balancing my teaching duties with my research schedule. Thank you to the
IT and TOP departments, for all of the technical help and advice, especially Marcus and Jasper.
Thank you to the Spinoza Center for Neuroimaging, especially Tinka, thank you for all your help with planning and scanning.

I would especially like to acknowledge the ‘Friday borrel club,’ which is actually more like a support group for UvA scientists. The countless motivational and inspiring conversations that I’ve had with everyone over the years are really priceless. I seriously couldn’t have done it with out you guys. You are too many to name at the risk of leaving somebody out, but when you read this, you will know that I am talking about you!

Thank you to all of the participants who took part in our studies. It would not have been possible without your interest, dedication and persistence. I would like to thank our synesthesia-network, as well as their relatives and family members, for all the interest and support. Also a big thanks to all of the participants who spent hours reading those ‘crazy’ books with colored letters! SC, thank you for letting me pick your brain! It has really been a pleasure to get to know you.

I would like to thank all of the students who have contributed to the research we’ve done: Anja, Chantal, Daan, Kitty, Lotte, Ricardo and all of my OP groepjes! Your work is greatly appreciated, and it was a pleasure to work with all of you.

A very special thanks to André for designing my thesis cover and art work! Not only that, but thank you for sharing your passion for art with me too. Keep up the good work!
I must also acknowledge and thank the publishers, Nijgh & van Ditmar. The Dutch version of our reading in color experiments would not have been possible without their cooperation and permission printing books.

Most of all, thank you, Mom, Dad & Jill, for your dedication and support, both emotionally and financially, of my ongoing (or never-ending?) education! I would not be where I am today without your support. Grandmammy and Aunt Rosie, I love you to death and I will miss you both very much at the ceremony! To my sisters, Lisa, Julie, Anne Marie, Jessica, and Emily and my ‘little’ brother, Alex: I love you guys and really wish you could be here! (Jessica, there is light at the end of the PhD tunnel! I know you will do it!) Aunt Lilian & Uncle Zeyd, thank you for all the support, generosity and motivation you have always shown me. Lisa, Abby, Steve, John, Carol, and Ki you guys are really my family and I love and miss you all! To all my family and friends back in the great US of A, even though I can’t name you all: Thank you guys for always being so supportive of me, in my education, but also in my passion for traveling. I know you guys don’t see me so much because of that, but it does not mean that I think of you less often.

My extended Amsterdam family: Delphi, Hagar, David, Abdou, Delyana, Luka, Marlies and all the Dijkstras and Hannekroots! I don’t even know how to start to say thank you for all the support over the years, throughout my PhD project, but even before that. There is nothing more important in life than enjoying it, that is what we know how to do best, something that a stressed-out PhD student cherishes more than anything. Thank you! My lovely paranympths also belong in this category...

Iris, you’ve been a solid rock of kindness and support for me over the years. You adopted me with open arms into your culture (when I was fresh off the airplane, you were the first person to give me a Dutch book!) and also into your life (including your home, your office, and even your holidays too!). I know that wherever you may go, you will not ‘just’ succeed, you will be the best at anything and everything you do. You will always be my Number 1! Viva la Presidenta!

My dearest Daan, you also deserve a big ‘Congratulations!’ for getting through this PhD project! I am constantly in awe of how you manage to be a laser beam of love and optimism. Thank you for your undying faith in my abilities, often times you believed in me much more than I believed in myself. That has made all the difference. There are no words that can really express how grateful I am to you. Choosing my boyfriend as a paranympth seemed strange to some people, but to me it seemed like the most natural choice: you’ve literally been by my side supporting me, every day, through all the ups and downs, for all these years. In my opinion, we did it together, because I couldn’t have done it without you. This thesis is dedicated to you!
