Improving health insurance coverage in Ghana: A case study
Kotoh, A.M.

Citation for published version (APA):
Kotoh, A. M. (2013). Improving health insurance coverage in Ghana: A case study

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Preface

To God be the glory. Great things he has done in my life. He put me under the wings of many individuals and institutions that made this book a dream come true.

My deepest gratitude goes to Prof. Dr. Sjaak van der Geest my principal supervisor. His supervision skills stand out for the best of caring and professionalism. He did not only give me ample opportunity to create my own thoughts, insights and implications of my findings, but also gave me critical comments that challenged me to stretch my imaginations to more deeply explore the linkages and broader implications of the results. Our meetings were always inspiring and encouraging. This helped me maintain my resilience and increased my optimism during the difficult moments of writing this book. I also wish to thank my co-promoters Dr. Daniel Kojo Arhinful, Department of Epidemiology, Noguchi Memorial Institute for Medical Research, University of Ghana and Dr. Irene Agyepong, the Greater Accra Regional Director of Ghana Health Services. They gave me the support I needed to get the work done; both practical support for my fieldwork and their valuable comments during the write up that helped shape my thesis. Thank you for your intellectual input and moral support. As a novice to the field of Anthropology, Sjaak and Kojo made me think like an anthropologist and helped me to better organise my themes and arguments. I cannot leave out Prof. Dr. Ria Reis. I had interest in Anthropology, but knew next to nothing about the subject. Sjaak and Ria did not know me very well, but gave me their maximum support to enable me get the basis of Anthropology in the Amsterdam Masters in Medical Anthropology. I am most grateful for this foundation in their fascinating discipline.

The Amsterdam Institute of Social Science Research (AISSR) also offered me a stimulating working environment. I am indebted to the members of the Body, Health and Care Cluster, especially the Post-Fieldwork Reading Club, who took time to read through some of my chapters. I must mention in particular my Ghanaian and Dutch colleagues: Jonathan Mensah Dapaah, Benjamin Kwansa, Erica van der Sijpt, Daniel Reijers and Jonna Both for their comments on some of my chapters. My sincere thanks go to Rosalijn Both for translating the summary of this thesis into Dutch. Beyond their encouragement regarding my academic work, Jonna and Rosalijn provided pleasant friendship that eased the loneliness that goes with writing. I trust that we continue the friendship.

I could not have completed this book without the support of the AISSR secretariat. José Komen, Janus Oomen, Hermance Mettrop, Teun Bijvoet, Eva Wulp, Joris de Vries, Nicole Schulp, Robert Davidson, Yomi van der Veen, Joanne Oakes and Karen Kraal for their kind disposition towards me during my programme. They acted promptly and got things done to enable me complete my PhD programme.

This publication is as a result of support from the entire research team; Reaching the Poor in Ghana’s National Health Insurance Scheme: Dr. Rob Baltussen, Dr. Ernst Spaan (Nijmegen Medical Centre, Radboud University, the Netherlands), Dr. Irene Agyepong, Dr. Daniel Kojo Arhinful, Prof. Sjaak van der Geest and my fellow PhD candidates, Genevieve Cecilia Aryeetey and Caroline Jehu-Appiah. Thank you for your administrative and practical arrangements for the SHINE Ghana project out of which this study was created. I also acknowledge Genevieve’s insightful comments on some of my chapters and her interest in getting the work completed. I am very grateful to you all.

I also appreciate the hard work of all opinion and community leaders and our research assistants who helped establish problem-solving groups and those who assisted in collecting the quantitative data. I also include the community members, health providers and staff of District Health Insurance Schemes (DHISs) in Central and Eastern Region of Ghana who willingly agreed to be problem-solving group (PSG) members and facilitators. They generously devoted their valuable time and efforts in implementing the intervention. They did not only give me information on the research topic, but ensured I had a comfortable living and made me part of their family. I am very grateful for your friendship, trust and hard work that ensured the successful completion of the intervention. Many thanks to Regional managers of the National Health Insurance Authority, DHIS managers and Regional and District Directors of Health Services in Central and Eastern Region, for your support in getting the intervention started and completed. I am particularly grateful to those who despite their busy schedules supervised the PSGs. I also owe a special debt of gratitude to community leaders and members, heads and staff of health facilities, District Health Directorates and DHISs and all those who granted me interviews. I do appreciate very much their warm reception, time and cooperation during my fieldwork. They allowed me into their communities and offices to observe events and gave me many insights and relevant information about not only the subject of study, but also my research setting and participants that helped me carry out the fieldwork successfully.

My very special thanks to the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO) for awarding me the scholarship to pursue the PhD programme and support from the AISSR, which made it possible for me to complete the book.

I acknowledge with sincere gratitude the role played by Dr. Cosmos Badasu and Dr. Mrs. Delali Badasu at the University of Ghana for providing me useful guidance and making time for me from the beginning of my application for admission to the PhD programme through to the end. They consistently encouraged me and offered the necessary support at difficult moments of my PhD trajectory. Besides, they provided parental support to my son in my absence. I sincerely thank them. Special thanks to Prof. Dr. Issabella Quakyi, Prof. Richard Adanu and Dr. Abu Manu at the University of Ghana, School of Public Health and the entire staff for their contribution towards this research anytime I was in Ghana. I would also like to express my gratitude to Prof. Rexford Oduro Asante, Central University College, Ghana, Prof. Fred Binka and Dr. Gameli Norgbe at the University of Allied Health, Ho. They offered the necessary support from the beginning to the end.

With the greatest affection, I wish to express my deep gratitude to all my family members and friends who supported me throughout the process. I feel emotionally indebted to my mother, Mary Mansah Somevi, my son, Evans Abiti and my sisters and brothers, cousins and other relations: Fabiana, Peter, Lydia and Frederick Osei, Judith and Rev. Theodore Paul Somevi, Christian, Raymond, Juliana, Gideon and Mawuli Kotoh, Gabriel Osatey, Samuel Lefoneh, Daniel, Franklin, Akorfa, Sena and Edem Kludze, Emil Atitsogbi and Patrick Ofor. Besides the folks at home I am also indebted to Leonard Foster and Andrew Komla Avadu at Brussels. They provided me a second home where I could visit anytime. Thank you for your love and helping me in numerous ways to complete my PhD programme. Those of you who have the ambition to pursue further studies I wish you success in your academic career.

My special gratitude goes to Emmanuel Fiagbey, Kofi Attor, Steve Akorli and Joe Gidisu. Not only did they open my eyes to engage in a post-graduate programme, but also made me part of their family. Their input into my academic achievement has been unswerving. Thank you for your continuous support over the years. Who would I be without your wonderful relationship? Mary Ankomah, Mary and Martha Akorli, Ann Afele, Christine Dorgbedo, Rosina Adobor and Matilda Aberese Ako; thank you for not being only my best friends, but also my sisters. I could not have travelled without your rewarding relationship, optimistic encouragement and the support I received from you. Finally, all those whose names are on the honour list but could not be mentioned here, I acknowledge the material and moral support of each and every one of you during this study. May God bless you for your endless support through my academic journey to come this far.

Agnes M. Kotoh
February 2013