Acknowledgements

Before April of 2011, I would not have expected to do a PhD outside of China, as studying abroad is fashionable but unaffordable for most Chinese students. One day, Professor Yuan, who supervised my master’s dissertation in China, informed me of the project launched by the Guangzhou Municipality funding students to do PhD programs abroad. She encouraged me to seize this opportunity to broaden my horizons, which, in her words, might change my life. After the frustrating preparation and applications, finally I got the admission to the law faculty of the University of Amsterdam in May of 2011. Then I came to the Netherlands in the autumn of 2011. At the beginning, everything was so fresh and exciting in my eyes. Compared with the large cities in China, the skyline of Amsterdam is much lower; old-fashioned bicycles are seen everywhere; everything moves at a slower pace. However, my excitement and romantic imagination was quickly converted to frustration and disappointment. Lack of fluency in English, gaps in knowledge, cultural differences, and homesickness all presented unexpected difficulties. Apart from that, living in Amsterdam has not been easy. I had two bikes stolen and moved three times in the first two years. Fortunately, I am not alone while being faced with all these difficulties during my adventures in the Netherlands. I would take this opportunity to express my gratitude to the people who have helped me out and made my life colorful along the way.

First of all, I would like to thank my parents for their unreserved love, for their continuous belief in me, and for their disobedience of the One-Child policy by giving births to me and my younger brother. In a culture where boys are preferred, my parents love me as much as they love my two brothers. After being laid off from collective enterprises in the 1990s, they have done many low-paid jobs to pay our living expenses and support our grandparents. Growing up in the chaos of the Cultural Revolution, they did not go to university, but they saw their three children through universities. Although they believe that girls need family protection, they have supported me to live alone on the other end of the earth. Compared to the European way of life, my parents have lived a very ascetic life. The word ‘luxury’ does not exist in their vocabulary. They are just like many ordinary Chinese people: tolerant, hardworking, humble, firm, and content. These qualities help them to cope with all kinds of difficulties in a rapidly transforming society, which has also taught me to be strong and optimistic.

I also owe a debt of gratitude to my supervisor, Professor Inge Van der Vlies, who ‘brought’ me to Amsterdam. Honestly speaking, without Inge’s encouragement and guidance, I do not think I could have finished the thesis within three years. I was aware of the doubts on my research skills and capability expressed by others from the beginning. That sometimes upset me, but thanks to Inge, I gradually learned how to deal with criticism and how to defend my arguments. Apart from her guidance in research, I am very grateful to Inge for her help and care in my expat life in Amsterdam. She has practically adopted me, by weekly cooking yummy stuff, taking me to museums, concerts, and movies, by lending me a real Dutch bike, and introducing me new friends... Another debt of gratitude is owed to my co-supervisor, Professor Arthur Salomons, who contributed a lot to the completion of this research.
I would like to thank so many kind and friendly people I have met in the Netherlands. Every time I fell from my oversized bike, kind-hearted passengers helped me up to treat the wound; my friends fixed my bike and cooked me food. Every time I had to move from one place to another, my friends offered me free moving services and furniture. I would like to thank my friends who generously helped me when I was in need in Amsterdam: Ron Elias, Yang Huishi, Li Yanbang, Zhou Jing, Shi Yifan, Lou Zhongyu, Su Yiming, Wei Zhen and Peng Dingchang. I would also like to thank all my colleagues of the department of constitutional and administrative law in the faculty. Being a non-Dutch speaker in a Dutch department, I was very reserved at the beginning, but my colleagues have been incredibly kind, friendly, patient, and caring. Although my Dutch is still lame, my colleagues have helped me integrate to Dutch culture by explaining Sinterklaas, stamppot, Rembrandt, Andre Hazes, Ilse DeLange, and Dutch constitutional law to me. Besides my colleagues in the department of constitutional law, I have received important support from my peers from the Netherlands-China Law Centre and other staff members in the faculty of law.

Last but not least, I would like to express my gratitude to the financial support of the Oversea Study Program of Guangzhou Elite Project, as well as all the persons listed below, who each contributed to the completion of this study:
