Acknowledgments

The PhD has been for me a fascinating, unique, exciting but also challenging journey. The wonderful people who have accompanied, supported and inspired me during the whole journey and those who have joined me, even only for some 'miles', have played a highly important role for the accomplishment of this dissertation.

I would like to express my deepest gratitude to my supervisor, Ans Kolk. Your constant support and guidance, your words of encouragement, your advice and your kindness have been invaluable for me. I am immensely grateful for having been given the opportunity to carry out my PhD under your supervision and for all your help during these years. I would like to thank my co-supervisor, Johan Lindeque; thanks for your support, for all your commitment in the supervision of my PhD, for being always available to talk and share ideas about the thesis and for all your precious suggestions and feedback.

I would like to thank the members of the doctorate committee Brendan O'Dwyer, Robert Kloosterman, John Grin, Marko Hekkert and Jonatan Pinkse for accepting to be part of the committee and for taking the time to read and assess my dissertation. My thanks go also to Irene Henriques, your advice has been highly important for my PhD. I would like to thank all my colleagues of the ISM section at Amsterdam Business School, for the enriching and inspiring seminars, meetings and conversations.

I would like also to thank my paranymphs and friends René and Inge. René, thank you so much for introducing me to the Amsterdam Business School, for your support in very important moments of my PhD journey, for your encouraging words and for the great dinners. I would like to thank Inge for being not only a great roommate but also a great friend. I will not forget all our conversations, our lunches, the walks, and when immersed in our thesis-related thoughts we locked each other inside the office. I would like to thank Meg, I have been very glad to share not only the office but very important stages of our PhD journey; thanks for all the chats, for your advice and friendship. I would like to thank Pushpika, it has been great to share with you the crucial final steps of the dissertation.

A fundamental presence in my whole PhD journey has been the one of my family. I would like to thank immensely my parents for always believing in me and supporting me, for having always the right words, for always being available to advise me for the best, for your understanding and your unconditional love, and for always making me feel that you were at my side, despite the thousands of kilometers that have been between us in the last years. I would like also to thank my brother for all he has done during these years; while I was far from home, the fact of knowing that I have a wise, responsible brother like you has been invaluable for me. I would like to thank Joao for his immense patience, for always listening to all my concerns and for giving me precious advice, for all his trips to Amsterdam and for making sure that 'la joie et la bonne humeur' were always present in our daily life during these years.

I would like to also thank my friends, for inspiring me, for reminding me that a PhD student should also have fun sometimes and for sharing with me the happiness for the accomplishment of the dissertation.

I would like to thank my friend Zeynep for her invaluable friendship during these years and for all her moral support. I will not forget all the conversations, the laughter, the exploration of new cities during conference trips, the parties and concerts. I would like to thank my friend Gil, for always giving the right advice and for the great political discussions. I would like to thank my friend Francesca, for taking part in celebrating the major milestones of my life, for motivating me, for your understanding and also for all the cultural-shopping-gastronomic weekends. My thanks go also to my friends Ines, Gloria, Agnese and Paola, for all the great rendez-vous around Europe during these years and to Ligheia and Zuleika, for sharing with me the happiness for having achieved this objective.
