There is no pleasure and enrichment without sharing and discussing with others. Thus, at the end of the work that unavoidably close a cycle of my life, I think is worth to express few words of gratitude.

Since most of the time these are probably the first lines you read of the thesis, I strongly recommend the summary at the end of it to have a taste on what this is all about (c'è un riassunto in italiano per non esperti).

I would like to thank first and in particular my daily supervisor Marieke Postma. Thanks for sometimes putting me back on the right track when I was “going too far”, for your patience in our endless and enlightening discussions. I have really appreciated the free spirited nature with which you approach your work and how, as a reflection, you taught me to face mine. Your strong critical attitude always gives me different perspectives on everything encountered during the research. Thanks for the countless corrections and for the invaluable contributions to this work. It is largely your merit if these years have been such an enjoyment for me.

I thank the committee for reading and, not least, approving this thesis. T. Prokopec and C. Germani for useful comments that helps to improve the manuscript. J. Espinosa for discussions about unitarity and UV completions.

My official promotor Eric Laenen, in particular for making, with a clever management, the Nikhef theory group environment such a welcoming, collaborative and non-hierarchical place. Despite the too early lunches, I could take advantage of this stimulating atmosphere and learn a lot from the members of this group. Thanks to the people who alternate along the years (I will forget someone): Adolfo, Domenico, Franz, Ivano, Satish, Leonardo, Michael, Andreas, Elena, Nathan, Marco, Martinus, Jordy, Evangelos, Jorinde (a pity we have never worked together), Darren, Andries, Jort, Pedro, Rabah, Lorenzo, Tom, Kallia, Jos, Bernard, Piet, Bert, Miguel, Tomas, Robert, Jan Willem, Wouter, Juan, Yajin...

Sander Mooij for discussing rods, clocks and ending up on different planets but mainly for introducing the best tradition of our group: the Fridays windmill. Melvin van den Bout for your modesty and the careful work on the 1-loop beta-functions in new Higgs inflation. Giulio, to remind me that more you study renormalization the less you understand it while Tommaso was being born and you were almost missing it. Giuseppe, although apparently we share the same language, the countless misunderstandings were the flavor of the first two years. Andrea for bringing the Torrazzo's shadow at Nikhef together with your meticulous way to be near to us. All the Nikhef's staff. Ed van Willigen for gently solving every problem in a flash. Maria Lemaire for your sweetness. Collins for smiling every morning. Rob for the enthusiasm in doing his work everyday. A big thanks to the UVA administrative staff for guiding me through the bureaucracy and miraculously allow me to do everything on time. Natascia for her contribution to the thesis layout.

A special thanks goes to my personal records of officemates: Takahiro, Sabrina, Jaroen, Ruben, Gilberto, Sonia, Gillian, Jacob. One by one, for one reason or another, they came and went. Some move for a permanent position, others for a warmer environment, some even decided to do experimental physics. A special thanks goes to Ruben, for the kindness always shown to me. Gilberto, from physics to discussions, you have been a constant discovery. In a dark winter day, your firm statement: "at the end of April, I will take one Saturday off", still remains one of the highlights of my PhD. If pursuing normality is what makes everything flat and boring, you are definitely far away from that. Gillian, especially for being the only one that "has survived" till the end. Thanks for being always so organized, tidy and on time. I realized that sometimes facing your opposite can be healthy. Thanks for the samenvatting translation, my Dutch would have definitely not been enough. S. Cotogno, we were great officemates but then the winter came...

Thanks to la Fucina, Fuocovivo, Dappermarkt, Landmarkt and Noordermarkt for allow me to survive in a country where the food is not exactly the priority. Andrei. We had two great years where you opened your world up to me at the point of being the only one who ever trust me has a paronymph. I thanks also my other first and last two flatmates Elisa and Robbert, and Aleksandra.

I thank the grant that gives me the opportunity to travel during my PhD. From the unforgettable carnival in Rio to the lights of Seoul, I really enjoyed and learned from the passion and motivation of physicists across the World. Among the PhDs of my generation I would also like to remember Gerben, Sam and Diego. Sergio Tapias for his continuous positive attitude and for being always available especially when it was more needed. My "cosmo-collegae" Drian, for the non-trivial thoughts spanning from physics to life in a fraction of a second. Eva, the start was uneasy but then we catch up. Thanks for your energy and for driving half of us towards a "new" dance. Francesca, for countless different things and especially to be always one step ahead of us, so that for everything that matter I could always "ask Francesca". Paolo, for showing me that you can fight for your principles without compromises and a touch of irrational that I love it.

Sabrina, it is true, we share the all PhD experience, since I took the first flight until we will move together with the same van. Between all, I have been touched by your impressive strength in facing life's hardships, you are an example, chapeau.

The Wereldhuis, where I learned that no-one stands alone and "my problems" have been definitely put into perspective. It is impossible to remember every name and face but let me at least start. John, for your ability in putting people together and for the beautiful idea that is "faces of the world" and now your new "diversity-huis". Izzy, for your generosity and for our illuminating discussions about a world which was unknown to me. Bance, for your incredible perseverance. I am sure one day you will be able to do the study you dream and deserve. Valentine, for your being completely unconventional, out of the box. You think and see in ways people cannot understand. Peter, for your fighting and tireless spirit. Saj, for being so kind and enigmatic. Musa for "working hard". Elizabeth, Tina, Helen, Marjori for african dinner "without onion" and much more. The Eritrean community, Asmeron, Efrain .., then Cangi, Kyiing, Eric, Salah, Richard, Tofol, Marta, Bo, Federica, Inma, Magdi, Yusuf, Mufti... Each one teaches me something that has been important over these four years but these acknowledgements have to come to an end.

Over these four years I felt a warm and strong support by a large number of people from Italy and scattered across Europe. For that I consider myself a lucky person. This turned in a constant flow of persons coming to Amsterdam.

Palmo, the bravest and first who came in a frozen December when I didn't even have a place to stay. Thanks for being always present no matter what. Una certezza. Giorgio, that conversely and cleverly came the beautiful period with tulips and king. Every time, in our always short and intense meeting around Europe, was heartwarming finding the same childhood confidence. Gianluca (Zid), you went around the World for years and then the most unexpected happens: a dutch girl, Fija, brings you here where we re-find each other as magnificent friends. In you I find something similar to me I like and something very different I envy.

Appanzati, Muolo and Gianni. Together and alone, in this daily love triangle that is stronger than any physical separation. When the distance was not an issue then there was the hail. Andrea, for being such a tireless enigmatic dreamer and to have the courage, each time, to try to explain the unexplainable: what you think. Gianni, for your passion, not only towards your love ones but towards life. Thanks to Franca and Beppe, Ignazio and Rosalba for their special hospitality.

In the already enlarged family, I would like to thank Giovanna for our chemistry during the numerous pleasant visits and especially for connecting past-present in the unforgettable one. Antonio for the flying poncho, for your strength. Nick and Jack, la Scapiigliatura, for being co-starring actors in the Fairphone thriller. Maddalena for being our lovely teenager at times, and being our mum at others.

Marianna, for being my source of inspiration. Thanks also for the beautiful painting that makes the cover of this thesis.

My Famigliissima. Le mie nonne, Meluccia e Clara che forse iniziano a perdere qualche colpo ma sono sempre lì a supportarmi seguendo ogni mio passo. Thanks to my aunt (zia) Nadia, for that crazy cycling among the goats of Ameland, Ivan for his intellectual charm, Carol for being here in extremis, my uncle (zio) Diego despite his non-love for abroad. Gian to never give up, and for choosing to meditate between Marken and Durgendam. My uncles Guido e Antonella for their resistance. Paola for the genuinely cares and enthusiasm. Marco for the appreciation. Teodoro for choosing to work next to the Malpensa airport and for the shared passion for the feasts.

My sister Vanessa with who during these four years the love has definitely bloomed, one says that distance helps... Thanks for the way you stay close to me e specialmente per quanto bene mi vuoi. Tancredi, just a bit undecided, visionary, open to all possibilities, who is not willing to feel powerless in front of this reality and perhaps, for that, my brother. My father Eugenio, for the 04-11, for the daily phone call from a bicycle flying in the wind to a car stuck in the traffic of the Milano's beltway. Your being almost a dutch in spirit prepared me to what was expecting me. Grazie per il supporto costante e sincero.

La mia Mamma, Anna, as every good italian mum she will never digest the distance. From the 48 hours together always too short ad un amore a distanza che a poco a poco sei riuscita ad esprimermi appieno.

I dedicate this work to Benedetta, so patience and crazy to follow me in all of this. We grew up together and we keep growing together, step by step and one step at a time, lasciandoci emozionare dalla vita.

Between Amsterdam and Paris, 1st October 2018,
Jacopo Fumagalli.
