UNIVERSITY OF AMSTERDAM

UvA-DARE (Digital Academic Repository)

The precarity of masculinity

Football, Pentecostalism, and transnational aspirations in Cameroon

Kovac, U.

Publication date
2018
Document Version
Other version
License
Other

Link to publication

Citation for published version (APA):
Kovac, U. (2018). The precarity of masculinity: Football, Pentecostalism, and transnational aspirations in Cameroon. [Thesis, fully internal, Universiteit van Amsterdam].

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: https://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, P.O. Box 19185, 1000 GD Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.

UvA-DARE is a service provided by the library of the University of Amsterdam (https://dare.uva.nl)

Download date:09 Sep 2026

THE PRECARITY OF MASCULINITY

FOOTBALL, PENTECOSTALISM, AND TRANSNATIONAL ASPIRATIONS IN CAMEROON

Uroš Kovač

THE PRECARITY OF MASCULINITY

FOOTBALL, PENTECOSTALISM, AND TRANSNATIONAL ASPIRATIONS IN CAMEROON

Uroš Kovač

© Uroš Kovač

Cover image: An inscription on a footballer's boot reads "Holy Trinity". Buea, Cameroon, December 2014. Photo by the author.

Design: Waarlé Grafische Vormgeving, Amsterdam, t.waarle@planet.nl
Print: Ipskamp Printing, Enschede

THE PRECARITY OF MASCULINITY

FOOTBALL, PENTECOSTALISM, AND TRANSNATIONAL ASPIRATIONS IN CAMEROON

ACADEMISCH PROEFSCHRIFT
ter verkrijging van de graad van doctor
aan de Universiteit van Amsterdam op gezag van de Rector Magnificus
prof. dr. ir. K.I.J. Maex
ten overstaan van een door het College
voor Promoties ingestelde commissie,
in het openbaar te verdedigen in de Agnietenkapel
op dinsdag 18 december 2018, te 10:00 uur

door Uroš Kovač
geboren te Belgrado, Servië

PROMOTIECOMMISSIE

Promotor:
prof. dr. N. Besnier	Universiteit van Amsterdam
Copromotor:
prof. dr. P.L. Geschiere	Universiteit van Amsterdam
Overige leden:
prof. dr. R.C. Pool	Universiteit van Amsterdam
prof. dr. A.P. Hardon	Universiteit van Amsterdam
dr. R. Spronk	Universiteit van Amsterdam
prof. dr. S.E. Brownell	University of Missouri
prof. dr. F.B. Nyamnjoh	University of Cape Town
dr. B. Ndjio	University of Douala

Faculteit der Maatschappij- en Gedragswetenschappen

The research reported herein received funding from the European Research Council under Grant Agreement 295769 for a project entitled "Globalization, Sport and the Precarity of Masculinity" (GLOBALSPORT).

To my parents

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements 9

Chapter one
Introduction: Precarity, Spirituality, and Moral Masculinities 13
Young Men, Precarity, and Cruel Optimism 17
Spirituality, Uncertainty, and the Gendered Subject 19
Beyond the Crisis of Masculinity 23
Athletes, Academies, and the Waytman Researcher: Fieldwork in the Southwest Region 27
Chapters and Arguments 31

Chapter two
Cameroon and the Southwest Region: Football Between Politics, Economy, Spirituality, and Transnational Markets 34
From Colonial Games to a Source of Regional Pride 35
Economic Crisis, Democratization, and Big Men in Football 40
Christianity, Pentecostalism, and "Sorcery" in Football 45
Commercialization of Global Football, Expanding Market of Players, and Dreams of Mobility 51
Football Between Regional and Transnational Dynamics 58

Chapter three
"This is a Business, not a Charity": Political and Moral Economy of Football 60
Death of a Big Man 61
Occult Interpretations 67
"This is a Business, not a Charity" 69
Producing Suffering Subjects 74
Political and Moral Economy of Football: Embracing Precarity 77

Chapter four
Becoming Useful and Humble: Football, Pentecostalism, and Moral Masculinities 79
Negotiating Masculinities on Football Fields 81
The Danger of Becoming Useless: Family Obligations 88

The Importance of Being Humble: Pentecostalism, Gendered Morality, and Dealing with an Uncertain Future 96
Masculinities, Moralities, and Uncertainty in Sport 101

Chapter five
Beyond Rupture and Continuity: Jars, Pentecostalism, and the Spiritual World of Football 103
Rupture as a Moral Statement: Jars and Pentecostalism in Football ... 106
"Tapping the Power" of God 113
Pentecostal Objects 117
Prophesy, Star, and Spiritual Eyes: Tackling Uncertainty 123
Rupture and Continuity: Beyond the Opposition 126

Chapter six
Athletes and Spiritual Wives: Football, Pentecostalism, and the Body ... 128
Football and the Dangers of Sex 132
Traditional Bakweri Wrestling: A Comparison 137
Pentecostal Christianity and the Control of Sexuality 141
Marine Spirits and Overcoming Immobility 143
Eating and Fasting 146
Spirituality and the Athletic Body 149

Chapter seven
Conclusion: Masculinities, Faith, and the Production of Aspiration 151
Neoliberalism and the Production of Aspiration 153
Spirituality – Between Instant Efficacy and Faith in Humility 156
Masculinities – Between Economy, Morality, and the Body 158

References 163

Summary 179

Samenvatting 183

Acknowledgements

My deepest gratitude goes to Cameroonian footballers and their families in Buea, Limbe, Bamenda, and the countryside for their hospitality, patience, friendship, and knowledge. Unfortunately, in order to safeguard their anonymity, I cannot thank them individually. In this thesis I tried my best to do justice to their experiences and perspectives. I thank them for sharing with me their lives, dreams, struggles, and triumphs, and for accepting me as a friend and researcher. I am also indebted to the football coaches, managers, and team staff members who facilitated my fieldwork in their clubs and academies. I thank them for allowing me to train in their clubs, ask countless questions, and probe their personal lives. The political crisis in the Southwest and Northwest Regions of Cameroon escalated while I was writing this book in the Netherlands, and my Cameroonian friends were constantly in my thoughts. Thankfully, I have not received any bad news, but I worry about their safety and future.

At the University of Amsterdam, I was privileged to be supervised by two outstanding scholars who guided me through my professional and personal development. Niko Besnier assembled and led an outstanding research team on sports and globalization and hired me as a PhD candidate. He was incredibly generous with his feedback, sharp and to the point in his critique of my manuscripts, and offered invaluable advice on academic and professional development. I thank him for placing his trust in me, for investing time and energy in my project, and for expressing the critical edge that sharpened my thinking. Peter Geschiere from the very beginning surprised me with his enthusiasm for my research project, especially at times when I was myself questioning its value. He carefully read and offered detailed comments on every single line of my thesis, illuminated exciting new perspectives on my ethnography, offered advice at every step of the writing process, and acted as a leading light in my personal development. I thank him for his kindness, patience, and humanity.

I joined the University of Amsterdam in 2013 as a member of the ERC-funded research project "Globalization, Sport, and the Precarity of Masculinity: GLOBALSPORT." I owe to this project far more than simply a title for my thesis: the people involved in it profoundly shaped my work and life during the years of the project and beyond. I wish to thank the GLOBALSPORT team – Adnan Hossain, Daniel Guinness, Márk Hann, Domenica Gisella Calabrò, Sebastián Fuentes, Paweł Banas´, Michael K. Peters, Minke Nouwens, and Douglas K. Thompson – for their friendship, inspiration, work, and support. Between Minnesota, California, Milan, Prague, and Crete, our trips and workshops have become the stuff of legend. The contributions of scholars and friends closely associated with the research project were also paramount in these challenging years. I thank Susan Brownell for closely reading my early writings and helping me formulate my arguments more explicitly. Leo Hopkinson, Romit Chowdhury, and Mariane da Silva Pisani provided critical feedback and much needed distractions. Lindsay Sarah Krasnoff offered great expertise in social media and communications. Mahmoud abd-el-Wahed was always a fabulous host.

My fieldwork in Cameroon would have been impossible without the help and guidance of my Cameroonian elders and friends. I thank Robert Mbe Akoko for providing me with much needed help in the first weeks of my stay, and for guidance until my very last day in the Southwest Region. Coach John Mayebi was incredibly helpful in showing me the ins and outs of Cameroonian football and introducing me to the right people. I thank Akebegho Kingsley Akoh for welcoming me and my partner into his home and for many thought-provoking conversations. I am grateful to Ravenstein Awuh (Crespo) for the good times, fun evenings, interview transcriptions, and sharp observations. Mokom Njang (Abu) inspired me with her always upbeat spirit. I thank Emmanuel Mwambo for generously sharing with me his house in Limbe. At the University of Buea, Emmanuel Yenshu Vubo assisted me in obtaining the ethical clearance for this research. At the Buea Archives, Primus Forgwe Azah illuminated the archives for me.

The University of Amsterdam provided me with a dynamic academic home, and I greatly profited from friendships and support from my colleagues. Apostolos Andrikopoulos was especially patient in the last stages of writing, and I was lucky to be able to ask his advice on finalizing the thesis and looking for opportunities beyond. Dina Zbeidy has kindly offered to organize my defense as a paranymph and to take over my defense in case I pass out in Agnietenkapel. Arsenii Alenichev and Jordi Halfman brainstormed about the title of my thesis, and always made my visits to the office cheerful. Over the years I met many incredibly inspiring people at the University of Amsterdam – Amisah Zenabu Bakuri, Tanja Ahlin, Natashe Lemos Dekker, Julie McBrien, Eileen Moyer, Carla Rodrigues, Megan Raschig, Marten Boekelo, colleagues from the "Chemical Youth" and "Long Term Care" research groups, and many others – I thank them all for challenging workshops and encouraging conversations. My gratitude also goes to the Amsterdam-based members of my PhD committee – Anita Hardon, Rachel Spronk, and Robert Pool – who took the time to read and approve this thesis. Special thanks go to the Cameroonians in my committee – Francis Nyamnjoh and Basile Ndjio – who will travel far to take part in my PhD defense in Amsterdam. I thank Lee Gillette for carefully copyediting this thesis, and Trees Waarlé for designing the book. Finally, my life was made so much easier by the wonderful administrative staff of the Social Anthropology Department and the Amsterdam Institute for Social Science Research (AISSR): Muriël Kiesel, Danny van der Poel, Janus Oomen, Alix Nieuwenhuis, Nicole Schulp, and Karen Kraal.

During the writing stage, I was lucky to receive valuable support from a number of scholars all over the world. They were all very generous with their critical feedback and discussions with them were paramount to the development of arguments in this thesis. Walter Gam Nkwi, Rogers Tabe Egbe Orock, Carmen Rial, Katrien Pype, Jarrett Zigon, James Esson, Paul Darby, Richard Giulianotti, John McManus, Sine Agergaard, Christian Ungruhe, Joseph Alter, Cheikh Tidiane Wane, William Kelly, Susana Narotzky, Tarminder Kaur, and Dorothea E. Schulz – I thank them all for taking the time to read my (sometimes incomprehensible) drafts, provide critical feedback, and open up new opportunities to further develop my research.

The first and last pages of this research project were written in Utrecht, a town that has over the years become my second (third? fourth?) home. I thank my colleagues and lecturers from the Utrecht University MSc program in cultural anthropology (CASTOR), who opened up new horizons for me. Special thanks go to Elke Linders, who was always there as a friend, as we both struggled through challenging PhD trajectories. Ton Robben's input was paramount in my decision to pursue a PhD in anthropology. Frances Nijssen provided crucial support in challenging moments. My gratitude goes to "De Kasko" living community that accepted me as a member and housemate during my last months of writing. Between Utrecht and Amsterdam, Uwe Thümmel has always been a fabulous friend and housemate. My longest-standing friendship in Utrecht is with Ana Poças Ribeiro, and I am very happy that she accepted to be my PhD defense paranymph.

Back in Belgrade, my home where everything started, my family and friends have been incredibly supportive and patient throughout my long absences. Nikola and Tamara Milenković inspired me with their love, and in the meantime Iskra was born. I always looked up to my aunt, Dragana Zečević-Saveski, who instilled in me a sense for drama and a joyful perspective on life. I thank my cousin, Aleksa Saveski, for making me fall in love with Belgrade once again. Of course, nothing would have been possible without the support of my parents, Branislava and Radivoj Kovač, who brought me up to appreciate others and always seek new challenges. This thesis hopefully stands as a testament that I have taken their love and trust seriously. This book is dedicated to them.

Finally, Joska Ottjes was there when the first phone call came that started this PhD trajectory, and she stuck around despite the long-distance travels and long working hours. We shared the joys of travel and discovery, and she allowed me to pull through in difficult moments. Her family – Lia, Jan, and Jesse – have accepted me as their own. I am grateful for her unwavering support during this journey, and I look forward to the adventures and challenges coming our way.

The Southwest and Northwest Regions of Cameroon.