The opening line of a poem called Doing by Rosemarie Waldrop summarises the more challenging days of writing a PhD: “I often don’t know what to do. Or if I want to.” Special thanks to my supervisors Sruti Bala and Boris Noordenbos for their tremendous support in working out what to do and helping me to befriend the inherent uncertainty. Thank you to my examiners Chiara de Cesari, Rolando Vasquez, Laura Cull Ó Maoilearca, Geoffrey Maguire, and Kathrin Thiele. I am so honoured that they agreed to engage with this thesis. To ASCA, and in particular Esther Peeren and Eloë Kingma: thank you for everything you did to support me and my work. I feel enormously lucky to have been able to engage in a research school that genuinely values both criticality and community. Thanks to Elize Mazadiego, Jan Willem van Henton, Katti Rottger, Colin Sterling, Geoffrey Maguire, and Esther Peeren for providing essential feedback on early drafts. I am so grateful to colleagues at the University of Buenos Aires and the University of Cambridge for hosting me as a visiting student in 2022 and 2023, for responding so thoughtfully to my questions and my writing, and for their enthusiasm in welcoming me into their research communities.

Thanks to my family for unwavering care and encouragement. Without their support, none of this would have been possible. Thanks especially to my niece and nephew, Phoebe and Louis Swain-Evans, for teaching me to hope harder.

The creative process which culminated in this PhD is indistinguishable from the friendships that I have been fortunate to have over the last few years. The new and old, the transitory and the substantive, the subtle and the unmistakable. The weaving together of these friendships with the writing of the thesis in my memory opens the last few years up a space of light, time, language, and embodiment. Car rides, long walks, phone calls, bruine kroegen, asados, karaoke bars, tree canopies, cliff-faces, roadside shrines, bike rides, meriendas, books as gifts, vaasjes, staring at the sea, windburn, mate, hot tears, spider bites, and mirth. An unorganised list of names: Mathew Cunningham, Sara Chitseko, Divya Nadkarni, Maria Plichta, Claudia Strange, Rosanagh Fuller, Jeff Diamanti, Max Gerber, Anna Greszta, Matthew Sharp, Amy Grant, Sherelle Thomas, Clare Gilchrist, Jack Enright, Sophie Grant-Prins, Hannah Sadler, Allie Gressler, Bea Cartwright, Harry Castle, Alex Santema, Megan Gooch, Arthur Allen, Ruth Law, Ariane Fecteau, Izzy Emberson, Ruby and Nick Gwynne-Robinson, Jatinder Kailey, Alice Héron, Eleri Connick, Helly and David Rogers, Philip Bailey, Colin Sterling, Katrusha Buniak, Clara Vlessing, Eleanor Walsh, Helen Perrault Newby, Melody Matin, Abi Hodson, Aya Sakamoto, Nermin El-Sherif, and Serene & Eugene Thomas. Tjalling Valdés Olmos was my community of one when I joined ASCA, and this PhD will forever be indebted to his abiding friendship and his prank calls. Thanks also to Chanel Valdés Olmos, for her pedagogy. Clara Vlessing is a complete nuisance and has made a sport out of distracting me from writing, and this PhD would not have been completed if not for her boundless care and generosity.

Por encima de todo debo dar las gracias a Nico y a la familia Conde, sin los cuales nada de esto habría sido posible: Marta, Alexa, Miranda, Hernán, Conchi y Álvaro. Daros las gracias no es suficiente. Gracias a Nadia Bolas, Daniela Daffinoti, Desi y Varvi Tazelaar, Angel Hernandez, Kiki Fernandez, Fer, Andy, "Pollo" Lisandro Eymann, Martina Liguori y "La Mona" Manu, "Turko" Agustin, Juan Mende, y Juan Gurruchaga. Nunca olvidaré el tiempo que pasamos juntos. Gracias a los voluntarios, archiveros, activistas, alborotadores, guardias de seguridad y limpiadores que dedicaron su tiempo a enseñarme las historias más difíciles y que continúan defendiendo esa historia en las circunstancias más difíciles. Gracias a mi profesora de castellano Ivana Casas, por tu paciencia, confianza y contagioso amor por la cultura bonarense.

Por último, a la propia Buenos Aires, a su cielo, su fausto, su decadencia. A sus comedia y su tragedia, que se entrelazan eternamente como las raíces expuestas de sus árboles ombu. A la ciudad que se apoderó de mi corazón y se niega a devolverlo.
