A lot of people offered help and support while I was preparing and writing this thesis. To all of you, thank you. Here, I would like to thank a few of them especially.

Florien Koopmans-van Beinum and Louis Pols for their supervision and constructive criticism on earlier versions of this thesis and on various papers.

The members of my thesis committee Machtelt Bolkestein, Gösta Bruce, Sieb Nootboomp, Gisela Redeker, and Toni Rietveld. Machtelt Bolkestein, Gisela Redeker, and Igor de Kort also for their discussions on discourse analysis, and for comments on earlier versions of parts of this thesis. Gisela Redeker and Toni Rietveld also for suggestions that have improved the final version.

My colleagues at the Institute of Phonetic Sciences for the nice and helpful atmosphere, technical assistance, and discussions on phonetics and on all kinds of other things. Special thanks to my office mates over the years: Rob van Son, Ineke van den Dikkenberg, and Barbertje Streefkerk in Amsterdam, and Tina Cambier and Johanneke Caspers in Leiden.

The Department of Linguistics and Phonetics of Lund University for fruitful discussions on my work and various other subjects, during and after my stay at the Department, and for a really wonderful time. Tack så mycket.

The Phonetics Laboratory at Leiden University, for the ‘pied à terre’ in Leiden over the last months.

Louis ten Bosch, Johanneke Caspers, Carlos Gussenhoven, Dik Hermes, Vincent van Heuven, Toni Rietveld, Marc Swerts, and Jacques Terken, for their participation as intonation experts, and useful suggestions on the speech material. Marc Swerts and Jacques Terken also for comments and discussion on this thesis in general.

The Faculty of Humanities of the University of Amsterdam, more specifically the Institute for Functional Research into Language and Language Use (IFOTT), the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO), and the Stichting Spraaktechnologie (SST) for financial support to attend conferences and workshops, as well as for my stay in Lund.

My colleagues and friends Tina Cambier, Saskia te Riele, and Juliette Waals for inspiring and ‘cheer up’ dinners in Utrecht and Amsterdam. Marlies Machielse for the very close email correspondence. Peri Bearman for revising my English.

Emeri and Anne van Donzel, my parents, and Nathalie, my sister, for their unfailing belief in me, their encouraging words and discussions, and just for being there.

And finally, but really before everything and everyone, Frank. I guess no further comments are necessary here.
