Prosodic Aspects of Information Structure in Discourse
van Donzel, M.E.

Citation for published version (APA):
References

Koopmans-van Beinum, F.J. (1992b). ‘Can ‘level words’ from one speaking style become ‘peaks’ when spliced into another speaking style?’, Proceedings International Conference on Spoken Language Processing, Banff, Volume 2, 1099-1102.

REFERENCES

REFERENCES

given’ information: Effects of persistence of grammatical function and surface position’, Language and Speech 37 (2), 125-145.

Tielen, M.T.J. (1992). Male and female speech. An experimental study of sex-related voice and pronunciation characteristics, Doctoral dissertation, University of Amsterdam.

1.3, subtask 1, Parametric Variation in Unification-based Perspective.

Van Donzel, M.E. (1994). ‘How to specify focus without using acoustic features’, Proceedings of the Institute of Phonetic Sciences 18, University of Amsterdam, 1-17.

in spontaneous Dutch speech’, Working Papers 46, Lund University, Department of Linguistics and Phonetics, 1-23.

discourse structure on the basis of written vs. spoken material’, Proceedings of the International Congres of Phonetic Sciences 95, Stockholm, Volume 3, 258-261.

judgements and textual structure in discourse’, Proceedings of the Institute of Phonetic Sciences 19, University of Amsterdam, 11-23.

Van Donzel, M.E. & Koopmans-van Beinum, F.J. (1996a). ‘Perception of discourse boundaries in spontaneous speech in Dutch’, Proceedings Fonetik-

Van Donzel, M.E. & Koopmans-van Beinum, F.J. (1996b). ‘Pausing strategies in discourse in Dutch’, Proceedings International Conference on Spoken Language Processing, Philadelphia, Volume 2, 1029-1032.

Van Donzel, M.E. & Koopmans-van Beinum, F.J. (1997a). ‘Pitch accents, boundary tones, and information structure in spontaneous discourse in Dutch’, Proceedings ESCA Tutorial and Research Workshop on Intonation, Athens, 313-316.

Van Donzel, M.E. & Koopmans-van Beinum, F.J. (1997b). ‘Evaluation of prosodic characteristics in retold stories in Dutch by means of semantic information structure in spontaneous Dutch discourse’, In: Botinis, A. (Ed.)

Intonation: Analysis, Models and Speech Technology, Cambridge University Press.

‘Speaker strategies in the use of prosodic means in spontaneous discourse in Dutch’, Proceedings ESCA Tutorial and Research Workshop on Sound Patterns in Spontaneous Speech, Aix-en-Provence, 135-138.

