Prenatal exposure to the Dutch famine and health in later life
Roseboom, T.J.

Citation for published version (APA):
Roseboom, T. J. (2000). Prenatal exposure to the Dutch famine and health in later life

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgements
Acknowledgements

The research described in this thesis could not have been performed without the 'children of the Hungerwinter', I thank them for their generosity in taking part in the study. I also thank those who collected the data: Marjan Loep, Mieneke Vaas, Yvonne Graafsma, Jokelies Knopper, Maartje de Ley, Lydia Stolwijk, the SOE nurses and Dr Anita Ravelli, who also coordinated the data collection and preceded me in writing a thesis on the Dutch famine study.

I am indebted to my promotors Professors Bleker and Bossuyt for their support, and their efforts to provide an opportunity for me to continue working on the Dutch famine study in the future.

It is a great pleasure to acknowledge the help of my co-promotor Dr Jan van der Meulen. Dear Jan, your criticism and passion have educated and stimulated me. You always gave detailed comments and useful advice, even after you had moved to the UK. The visits to Southampton and London were invaluable. I really enjoyed working with you!

I am grateful for the help and hospitality of Professor David Barker and Dr Clive Osmond. The visits to the unit have contributed substantially to the research described in this thesis. The boating, drinks in the dovecot, toad-in-the-hole and many more things made these visits unforgettable! I am looking forward to our future collaboration.

I would like to express my gratitude to everyone at the MRC EEU for their hospitality and their interest in the Dutch famine study. I enjoyed discussing our findings with doctors Catherine Law, Caroline Fall (who also taught me the difference between Dutch Antilles and Dutch Anthills), Keith Godfrey, Christopher Martyn (who also offered sandwiches to take home in case the Hungerwinter would strike again), David Phillips, Cyrus Cooper, and Allistair Shiell. Special thanks go to Ria, Mary and Mark for putting me up, thank you for your warm-heartedness, I could not have wished for better places to stay!

I would like to thank all of my colleagues at the KEB for their contribution to a pleasant atmosphere at the department, and Dr Hans Reitsma, Dr Martin Prins and Professor Gouke Bonsel for their comments on parts of this thesis.
I thank my ‘paranymfs’ Casper and Sebastiaan. Dear Cas and Bas, it is good to know you will both be standing next to me during the defence of my thesis.

Finally, I would like to thank the two most special ‘children of the Hungerwinter’, my parents, for their unconditional and never-ending support. I also thank my mother for her drawings on the cover, and my father for reading my manuscripts, his useful comments and help in numerous other ways.

Guido, my love, writing this thesis would not have been anywhere near as much fun without you!