Acknowledgements

This work depends on the contribution and encouragement of many individuals. I am deeply appreciative of all who made this work possible and would like to express them all my grateful thanks.

To Professor Hanneke De Haes who assumed the academic responsibility of this thesis and who offered me scientific and emotional support in all this work process.

To Professor Darius Razavi and Doctor Nicole Delvaux who introduced me to the field of psychooncology and planted the seed of knowledge about patient satisfaction assessment. They elicited this thesis project and offered me helpful support throughout this endeavour.

To Neil Aaronson, Ann Cull, Jane Blazeby, Andrew Bottomley and the EORTC quality of life group members who collaborate in this work by sharing their knowledge, experience and ideas with me.

To Doctor Alberto Costa who offered me to implement this research project at the EIO in Milan, thanks to grants from the American-Italian Cancer Foundation and from the EIO Oncology Foundation. To Professor Aron Goldhirsch from the EIO Oncology Department and to Professor Jean-Yves Petit from the EIO Breast Reconstructive Surgery Unit who allowed and supported the pursuit of this research.

To Chris Robertson from the EIO Epidemiology and Biostatistics Department who performed major statistical analyses of this work. I am deeply indebted for his help.

To my colleagues of the EIO Psycho-Oncology Research Unit, Florence Didier, Elena Scaffidi, Dora Fonzo and Stefania Brignone, who participated in recruiting and motivating patients to participate in this research.

To my colleagues of the CAM in Brussels, Christine Fravacques and Serge Marchal, for their help in the preliminary stage of this project.

To Doctor Laure Copel from the Institut Curie, Unité mobile d’accompagnement, in Paris, to Professor Simon Schraub from the Centre Paul Strauss, in Strasbourg, to Doctor Louise von Essen from the Department of Public health and Caring Sciences of Uppsala University in Uppsala, Sweden and to Professor Jerzy Meyza from the M. Sklodowska-Curie Memorial Cancer Centre in Warsaw, Poland, who were responsible of patients’ recruitment in France, Sweden and Poland.

To all patients who participated to this work taking their time in filling in the questionnaires.

To Doctor Sylvie Dolbeault who allowed me to finalise this book and to my colleagues of the Institut Curie Psycho-Oncology Unit, Sandrine Cayrou and Cécile Flahault for their support in the final phase of this work.

Last but not least, to Philippe Autier, Anton and Gilles who were so patient and supportive throughout this challenging enterprise.

I would be very pleased that this book pay tribute to all persons who contributed to the realisation of this work.
