Judaism, environmentalism and the environment: Mapping and analysis
Gerstenfeld, M.

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgments

Many thanks are due to all those who have enriched my ideas on Judaism and the environment. I am greatly beholden to Lucas Reijnders. In a relatively new discipline, it is indeed a privilege to have an on-going opportunity to discuss a text with a leading expert. It is rare to find his combination of orderly thought, and the ability both to comment in detail in many areas and to always provide a quick response. I am highly indebted to Albert van der Heide for his thorough reading of the drafts. His many observations were a stimulus for further research and helped me to avoid a variety of mistakes.

I am very grateful to those who have commented in detail on the entire draft or parts of it: Joseph Agassi, Yehudah Levi, Isaac Lipschits, Shubert Spero, Avraham Zimels and Zvi Zohar. I am thankful for their willingness to devote so much time to my research, as well as for their many suggestions.

Thanks are equally due to others who have given a variety of valuable comments: Benyamin Adler, Lea Dasberg, Daniel Elazar, Hans Eyl, Yehuda Feliks, Aryei Fishman, Moshe Greenberg, Frits Hoogewoud, Ilan Troen, Zvi Maimon, Peter Medding, Ray Melmed and Nick van Uchelen. Their comments have been very helpful.

I appreciate the kindness of those who provided me with additional sources, particularly in contemporary Jewish environmental literature, a field in which it is difficult to assemble material. I am especially thankful to Steve Shaw for his kindness in giving me several important American sources, and to Eilon Schwartz for making his master thesis available.

Many thanks are due also to Lea Rappaport, who assisted in the literature research when this study was at its beginning, and to Tsachi Golan, who did so in the later stages.

I would especially like to thank Jill Rogoff, who typed, reread and corrected the manuscript so often. Without her conscientious and good-humored approach, the day of publication would still be far away.
Acknowledgements

Many thanks are due to all those who have contributed to this project, both in terms of the environmental impact assessment, and in the provision of feedback and assistance. In particular, I would like to single out those who have provided invaluable guidance and support throughout the process.

I wish to express my gratitude to the following individuals and organisations for their assistance and support:

[List of thanks and acknowledgments]

I am particularly grateful to [Name], who has provided invaluable advice and guidance throughout the project. Their support and encouragement have been invaluable.

I would like to thank [Name] for their assistance in [specific area], and [Name] for their contributions in [specific area]. Their expertise and knowledge have been instrumental in ensuring the success of this project.

Finally, I would like to acknowledge [Organisation] for their generous support and funding. Their contribution has been crucial in enabling the completion of this project.

I would like to thank all those who have contributed to this project, both in terms of the environmental impact assessment, and in the provision of feedback and assistance. In particular, I would like to single out those who have provided invaluable guidance and support throughout the process.

I wish to express my gratitude to the following individuals and organisations for their assistance and support:

[List of thanks and acknowledgments]

I am particularly grateful to [Name], who has provided invaluable advice and guidance throughout the project. Their support and encouragement have been invaluable.

I would like to thank [Name] for their assistance in [specific area], and [Name] for their contributions in [specific area]. Their expertise and knowledge have been instrumental in ensuring the success of this project.

Finally, I would like to acknowledge [Organisation] for their generous support and funding. Their contribution has been crucial in enabling the completion of this project.