ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In the process of writing this dissertation I received help from many people. First and foremost, I thank my advisor and chair Arnoud Boot for his time, guidance and continuous encouragement. There is no way I can express my gratitude for his support and the opportunities he gave me to learn finance and experience academic life in the US. Second, I am grateful to professor Anjan Thakor (University of Michigan) for giving me the opportunity to attend several Ph.D courses at the School of Business of Indiana University in the Fall of 1993. These courses stimulated my interest in theoretical research in corporate finance and financial intermediation. I also benefited greatly from his comments on an earlier draft of this dissertation. Third, I thank the other members of my dissertation committee, professors Enrico Perotti (University of Amsterdam), Ailsa Röell (Princeton University), Piet Moerland (Tilburg University) and Martin Fase (University of Amsterdam) for reading and commenting on earlier versions of this dissertation.

Parts of this dissertation were written while I was at Tilburg University, the University of Amsterdam and Washington University. At Tilburg University I thank Patrick Bolton, Dolph Cantrijn, Eric van Damme, Hans Degryse, Piet Duffhues, Frank de Jong, Theo Nijman, Henk Oosterhout, Marcel Roberts, Ailsa Röell, Frans de Roon and Piet Verheyen for their interest in my work. In addition, I appreciate all the help of the CentER secretaries and Nancy Kanters and Nienke Boelhouwer. I furthermore thank my colleagues of the Finance Group at the University of Amsterdam for their hospitality. I very much enjoyed my weekly (and sometimes even more frequent) commute to Amsterdam, and always felt very welcome in the department. In particular, I would like to thank Linda van Goor for sharing her office with me, as well as Christa Bouwman, Pieter van Hasselt, Remko Hilhorst, Ben Jacobsen, Jeroen Ligterink, Floor van Oers and Pieter van Oijen for their helpful comments and discussions, and a lot of fun. I especially thank Netty Coolen for her invaluable help and intermediation in the past few years, and for many nice lunches and dinners in Amsterdam. I also thank the colleagues from other universities in the Netherlands and abroad for the interest they have shown in my research.

At Washington University, I thank Stuart Greenbaum and Kerry Back for giving me the opportunity to visit Olin, and all my colleagues here for providing a stimulating and very pleasant working environment. In particular, I would like to thank Phil Dybvig, Venky Panchapagesan, Jianping Qi and John Scruggs for their advice and helpful discussions, and also Kersi Antia, Gaby Berhe, Debra Krolick and Mark Soczek for all their help and their interest in my work and my well-being. I very much look forward to extending my stay at Olin as a member of the Department of Finance.

On a more personal note, I thank my parents and Berry, Ellen, Pieterjan and Ingrid for their patience, encouragement and unconditional support. Furthermore, I thank my friends Wenda, Arjan, Wil, Pieter, Geert and Michel for many good times. I would especially like to thank Queeny, Linda, Ben, Jeroen and Henk for their friendship and support in the past years.

Finally, I thank Kersi and Debra ('Debbie') for making fun of the Dutch, for the greatest apple-cranberry crisp, and most of all, for being friends that anyone could only hope for.
