2 A Logical Toolkit for Theory (Re)construction 5
   2.1 Introduction ........................................... 5
   2.2 Rational reconstruction ................................. 9
      2.2.1 Step 1. Identifying the core theory ................. 9
      2.2.2 Step 2. Analyzing key concepts ................. 10
      2.2.3 Step 3. Informal axiomatization ............. 11
   2.3 Formalization ............................................ 12
      2.3.1 Step 4. Formalization proper .................. 12
      2.3.2 Step 5. Formal testing ........................... 13
      2.3.3 New results ........................................ 14
   2.4 The 5-step approach at work ......................... 15
      2.4.1 Identifying the core theory ....................... 15
      2.4.2 Analyzing key concepts .......................... 16
      2.4.3 Informal axiomatization .......................... 17
      2.4.4 Formalization proper ............................. 20
      2.4.5 Formal testing ..................................... 20
   2.5 Discussion and Conclusions ............................ 25

3 The Logic of Organizational Markets 33
   3.1 Introduction ........................................... 33
   3.2 Rational reconstruction ................................. 34
      3.2.1 Core theory ....................................... 35
      3.2.2 Key concepts ..................................... 37
      3.2.3 Informal axiomatization .......................... 41
   3.3 Formalization ............................................ 46
4 Competition in Industries

4.1 Introduction ........................................................................ 57
4.2 Industries as networks of competitive relations .......... 59
  4.2.1 Competitive relations between firms: potential and actual 59
  4.2.2 Appeal to resources: a bimodal graph ..................... 61
  4.2.3 Competition between firms: a unimodal graph .......... 61
  4.2.4 Competition about resources: competitive intensity .... 63
  4.2.5 Competitive intensity versus niche intersection ....... 63
  4.2.6 Competitive pressure ............................................. 64
  4.2.7 Aggregating competitive pressure ......................... 67
  4.2.8 Back to the market network: consumer preferences .. 67
  4.2.9 From continuous appeal relations to competition .. 68
  4.2.10 Niche size and the distribution of competitive pressure 70
4.3 Measuring competition: the market of Internet search engines 73
  4.3.1 Internet search engines: background .................... 73
  4.3.2 Competitive dynamics in the search engine industry .. 74
  4.3.3 Measurements .................................................. 75
  4.3.4 Data ......................................................... 76
  4.3.5 Empirical results ............................................. 76
4.4 Summary and results .................................................... 81
4.5 Discussion and conclusions .............................................. 83

5 The Market of Internet Search Engines 89

5.1 Introduction ................................................................. 89
5.2 The market of Internet search engines: a short history .... 92
  5.2.1 Professionalism and differentiation ....................... 93
5.3 Organizational ecology ................................................ 94
  5.3.1 Resource partitioning theory ................................ 94
  5.3.2 Density dependence theory .................................. 96
  5.3.3 Competition .................................................... 97
  5.3.4 Legitimation ...................................................... 98
  5.3.5 Density dependence at work ................................ 101
5.4 Connecting resource partitioning and density dependence theory 101
5.5 Data .............................................................................. 105
  5.5.1 Source of the data ................................................ 105
  5.5.2 Identifying the industry members ......................... 105
  5.5.3 Data collection ..................................................... 106
  5.5.4 Measurements .................................................... 108
5.6 Results ........................................................................... 111
  5.6.1 Population size ................................................. 111
5.6.2  Competition and legitimation ....................... 114
5.6.3  Vital rates ........................................ 115
5.6.4  Generalists and specialists .......................... 118
5.7  Concentration and dimensionality ........................ 124
   5.7.1  Concentration ................................... 125
   5.7.2  Market dimensionality ............................ 126
5.8  Discussion and conclusions .............................. 133

6  Results and Conclusions ................................. 143
