Research for this doctoral thesis received financial assistance from the Leverhulme Trust and Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst.

Acknowledgements

I am indebted to the many people and organizations whose support and encouragement have made this dissertation possible.

First to my supervisors, Justyna Mrozewicz and Geert Janssen. Their critical feedback and guidance have shaped this project from its earliest stages. I am grateful for their patience as it has moved through its various incarnations, and their willingness to let me pursue my own path while ensuring the project remained (more-or-less) on track.

This project was made possible in its early stages by generous funding from the Leverhulme Trust and the DAAD (Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst). I am particularly thankful to the Leverhulme Trust for their support of the extensive archival field work which this project required. I am indebted to the archive and library staff who have welcomed me to their institutions, answered my questions, and retrieved documents for me. In particular, the staff of the Bremen State Archive, who have been without exception extremely helpful and generous in responding to my requests and queries.

At the University of Amsterdam, I have been fortunate to be part of three research communities, all of which have contributed in different ways to the ideas in this volume. The Medieval History Group provided an intellectual home to test ideas and receive constructive feedback. I am particularly grateful to Josephine van den Bent, Frans Camphuijsen, Janna Coomans, Mario Damen, Lola Digard, Serena Ferente, Guy Geltner, Lea Hermenault, Nathan van Kleij, Christian Manger, Arend-Elias Oostindier, and Ester Zoomer. The Early Modern History Group has been equally welcoming and stimulating, and I am grateful to Lotte van Hasselt, Laura van Hasselt, Karen Hollewand, Charlotte Meijer, Djoeke van Netten, Bob Pierik, Jonas van Tol, Hans Wallage, and Antonia Weiss for their feedback and encouragement. The Amsterdam Centre for Urban History (ACUH) has provided a valuable forum for contact with historians outside my usual period and geography, enriching my understanding of urban life across different contexts. I thank Moritz Föllmer, Danielle van den Heuvel, Tim Verlaan and the many guests of the ACUH seminar over the years for helping me think about the broader implications of my work.

I am thankful for a research stay at the Europa-Universität Viadrina Frankfurt, where I was warmly welcomed by Klaus Weber and his colleagues Rita Aldenhoff-Hübinger, Antonia Kauffold, Peter Schönherr, Anka Steffen, Paula Tinnemann, and Felix Töppel. Their thoughtful comments and generous sharing of expertise have had an important impact on the research presented here.

Over the course of this project, I have benefited from the insights and critiques of numerous scholars who have commented on my work at conferences and workshops. I am grateful to Thomas Ashby, Tobias Boestad, Hanno Brand, Stefan Brenner, Torsten Dos Santos Arnold, Oscar Gelderblom, Bart Holterman, Angela Huang, Carsten Jahnke, Marijke Kooijman, Alberto Rodríguez Martínez, Sheilagh Ogilvie, Maarten Prak, Jeroen Puttevilles, Cornelis Schlit, Ruth Schilling, the late Peter Spufford, Ad Tervoort, Laura Tillery, Thomas Weller, and Jacco Zuijderduijn for engaging with my work and sharing their critiques, perspective and wisdom.

The Posthumus Institute provided excellent training in economic and social history and connected me with a network of scholars working on similar themes. I thank Maartje AB, Heleen Blommers, Damion Bunders, Karel Davids, Jessica Dijkman, Aditi Dixit, Alexander Geelen, Ewout Hasken, Bram Hoonhout, Rogier van Kooten, Faheem Rokadiya, Neilabh Sinha, Tim van Rijswijk and Teuntje Vosters for enriching discussions and for making workshop sessions both intellectually rewarding and fun.

Special thanks to Suzie Hermán for her thoughtful reading of my work, inspiring conversations on the Early Modern Hanse, but above all for her kindness and friendship.

I greatly appreciate the many friends who have helped me through what has been a much longer process than anyone expected: Agustin Ferrari Braun, Nata Govdalenok, Anouk Hoogendoorn, Annie de Jong, Priyanka Kalra, Manuel Llano Martinez, Davide Martino, Dan O'Gorman, and Oscar Talbot. And to my colleagues for their tolerance of and occasional interest in this strange hobby of mine: Rainier Beelen, Sanne van den Bos, Elke Korn, Irsa Lumbic, and Anouk Mol.

Finally and most importantly, I am deeply grateful to Simon and Jacquie Collin and to Marlou Scholten for encouraging me to persist with this project, for their gracious support and assistance, and their unwavering belief in me.
