Propositions

1. Scientists can be activists, especially when it concerns their own research field.

2. Universities can set a leading example by practicing what they teach.

3. A good working atmosphere is essential for good research.

4. Science communication is a vital part of research.

5. Research can profit by more interaction and shared vocabulary between different research fields.

6. Observer bias should be carefully accounted for in every study design.