Shame and desire. Intersubjectivity in Finnish visual culture
Laine, T.K.

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgements

An understanding heart is everything in a teacher, and cannot be esteemed highly enough. One looks back with appreciation to the brilliant teachers, but with gratitude to those who touched our human feeling. The curriculum is so much necessary raw material, but warmth is the vital element for the growing plant and for the soul of the child.

Carl Jung

I have worked with this thesis for five years, often enthusiastic, but just as often frustrated about my own incapability to give it form and structure. I have thought about it without thinking about it, and I have written it without writing it. I have put it aside for a while, and I have taken it up again, I had made up my mind only to change it back once more, I thought it was all over but it hadn’t even started yet. This shapeless, uncertain project would never have developed into a PhD thesis without the guidance, inspiration, and support of people in both my academic and my personal life to whom I hereby would like to extend my deepest gratitude.

First, I would like to acknowledge and extend my inmost gratitude to my supervisor Thomas Elsaesser, to whose insightful comments, faith, and enthusiasm in this thesis I owe a great debt. I feel privileged to have worked with a supervisor who, in believing in you, makes you believe in yourself.

This thesis was enabled by the financial assistance from The Academy of Finland, and I gratefully acknowledge their support.

I would also like to thank José van Dijck, Patricia Pisters, Astrid Söderbergh Widding, Ed Tan and Ginette Verstraete for showing interest in this thesis and agreeing to act in my promotion committee. I would especially like to thank Richard Allen and Charles Forceville for their critical insights on the earlier stages of the manuscript.
I am ever so grateful to all my friends and colleagues at the department of Media and Culture, University of Amsterdam, and especially to Laura Copier and Jaap Kooijman. Many thanks also to the Amsterdam School for Cultural Analysis for giving me an academic home, and especially to all the participants that I have met at the ASCA Theory Seminar, led by Mieke Bal, that has been an inexhaustible source of interdisciplinary inspiration. Eloë Kingma, the managing director of ASCA, is to be especially thanked for her expertise and help I have received from her.

Special thanks to Pekka Turunen, Eija-Liisa Ahtila, as well as the staff of Crystal Eye, Kinotar, and Sputnik for their kind assistance with my research material.

Writing a PhD-thesis can be a very lonely activity. De Hollandsche Manege was the place to avoid the danger of solipsism. My thanks goes therefore to the staff of the Manege, to the friends I have made there, and to Halla in particular.

But my deepest gratitude goes to my family and friends, both in Finland and in the Netherlands, for their initial support, warmth, and love, and especially to Remus Thei Dame, a kindred spirit without parallel.

Tarja Laine, Amsterdam, February 2004