The journey I travelled to produce this thesis was indeed lonely and trying, but above all, the most satisfying moment in my life. The sad moments are best forgotten, while for the happiness resulting from the fulfilment of this task I would like to thank all those who in many ways helped me through. While it is impossible to acknowledge by name all those who contributed to the production of this thesis, it is unjustifiable not to mention a few individuals whose contributions are invaluable.

My friends and colleagues at Moi University and Egerton University were very supportive, providing me with both material and moral support. Beverley at Southampton University, your support is appreciated. Life in the Netherlands would have been miserable without the support of Adano, Guled, Ikiara, Jane, Jimmy, Mironga, Munzala, Mwangi, Njogu, Ochiel, Odipo, Ruth, Shem, Vincent, Yshanwu, and many others. Thank you all. Thanks to colleagues and staff at AGIDS and IBED who happily helped me adjust and settle down in Amsterdam.

The support and guidance from my promotor Prof. Jan Sevink and co-promotor Eric Cammeraat and field supervisor Elias Ucakuwun is gratefully acknowledged. I feel deeply indebted to Luuk Dorren, a colleague and a friend, who provided me with invaluable support and advice in times I needed it most. During the field campaign, I benefited from the help of Harrison Mturi, Richard Tarus, Johan Berkhout, Lokien and Josja. Administratively, the support of Prof. Ton Dietz and Annmiek Haastrecht, together with the staff of School of Environmental Studies. Moi University, is acknowledged and appreciated. Finally, I sincerely thank NUFFIC and Moi University for making it all possible.

Lastly, I wish to thank my brothers and sisters and their families, my parents and relatives and friends for the support they gave me. What could I do without those encouraging letters and the support you gave my children? To my wife Chao, thank you for taking up my duties while I sojourned. To my children, thank you for understanding. To all, thank you so much, whatever I got is for all of us.
