In a project covering more than ten years in total there have been many people and institutions that have contributed generously in various ways. I would like to take this opportunity to extend my heartfelt gratitude and to mention several of them.

The research on which this book is based was part of the 'Livelihood and Environment' programme of the Faculty of Environmental Sciences of the University of Amsterdam. The fieldwork in northern Benin was carried out between 1990 and 1993 and was funded by the Netherlands Foundation for the Advancement of Tropical Research (WOTRO) of the Netherlands Organization of Scientific Research. Part of the physical geographical fieldwork was financed by the Faculty of Environmental Sciences of the University of Amsterdam. These institutions are gratefully acknowledged herewith.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to my supervisors Leo de Haan and Ad de Bruijne for their support, their reading of the numerous drafts and their words of encouragement that always came at the right time. I would especially like to thank Leon de Haan for continuing his supervision when he became professor at the University of Nijmegen. I sincerely appreciate the time he took for me.

Annette Kruithof is acknowledged for writing the initial research proposal on the basis of her field visits in the 1980s. I am grateful to Professor Thomas Bierschenk of the Free University of Berlin and his students who received me so hospitably in Berlin in 1990 and provided me with a wealth of information on northern Benin before I went into the field. Furthermore I wish to acknowledge the people at the Faculty of Agricultural Sciences of the National University of Benin, especially Gauthier Biaou and Anselme Adgebidi. Their help facilitated my first stay in Cotonou and was of great value during the course of the study. Cyrille Honagbodé is thanked for assisting me during my first month of study in the libraries and archives of Parakou, Abdoulaye Mouphtaou for processing part of the data and Germain Otto for assisting me in Karmama.

My greatest debt of gratitude is to the people of Tondikuaria, Karimama and Kompani, my Fulbe and Dendi assistants and companions and the Fulbe, Dendi and Gourmantché families who offered me unreserved hospitality and who were willing to share their knowledge and views. It would be impossible to list all of them individually, however a few do need to be mentioned by name.

First of all I want to thank my assistants Ammah Soumeila, Bio Massi Soule, Oumarou Sambo and Amadou Mama Rikou. They collected data for this thesis and acted as interpreters in the field. The matters under study were often delicate and difficult to understand for an outsider but they did their utmost to explain everything. It goes without saying that the interpretations of the facts are entirely mine and that the assistants cannot be held responsible for the views offered in this book.
I also would like to mention Boube Joffo, Soumana Hassan and Tidjani Ousmane who all contributed in their inimitable ways. Thanks are also extended to Mr Djouro in Gouroukambou and Mr Mazou Doumbani in Malanville who helped me greatly in my understanding of the history of the people in the region. I also would like to mention the village chiefs of Kompani and Tondikuaria and thank them for their permission to carry out the research in their villages, for their hospitality and for their patience in responding to all my questions.

In Karimama my good neighbours who always came to the rescue in times of crisis and entertained me on numerous evenings were Kalam, Souno and their families. Without their help and friendship Karimama would not have been the pleasant home it became for me. The people in Karimama trusted that I would inform the outside world about their problems. Although it took a long time to finish this project, I hope the information provided in this book will contribute in a modest way to a better understanding of their situation.

I would like to acknowledge the Beninese local and national authorities for granting me access to their reports and archives and for finding the time to exchange views about the issues under study. I particularly wish to thank Akpomey Honoré for his help in finding the Karimama court reports. Werner Lohr supplied me with invaluable historical material and Hugo van Swinderen and Mr Hounouvé are thanked for exchanging their views on pastoralism and providing me with important publications. I want to thank Victor Coenen and David Niemeijer for their contribution to the physical geographical work and Victor Coenen for drawing the land-use maps on the basis of aerial photos and satellite imagery. I also gratefully remember our happy times together in the field.

During my stay in Benin many people helped me by offering friendship and hospitality. I gratefully remember the friendship received from Bert Vermaat and Jessy Bokhoven in Kandi and the hospitality of Petra van Ham and Resi Janssen when I was in Cotonou. I thank Jurgen Maier for his hospitality and invitations for dinner, on the condition that I would cook! I still deeply appreciate the way in which Bert Vermaat helped me out when I suddenly became ill. He ensured that during the crossing of the river by the transhumants - a crucial period in the fieldwork - the assistants could continue their work while I was recovering in the Netherlands.

During my period in the field the issues of 'bandje voor Antje', recordings of parties I was not present at, greatly boosted my morale: thanks to Robert Lie, Arne Bongenaar, Judith de Jong, Josefien Bersee, Renee Kuit, Jan Fokkema, Jan de Wolf, Bart Haensel and Piet van Diepen.

I also gratefully remember the sociable times and inspiring discussions I had with the members of the parallel research project 'Agriculteurs et Elevateurs au Nord-Benin'. I would like to mention especially Pyt Douma, Yvonne van de Berg, Mathieu Houinato, Epiphane Quenum, Theophile Djedjebi and Steven Paris who unfortunately died a few years ago; my memory of him will be treasured.
Back home in the Netherlands, during the writing of this book many people helped me during the writing of this book. I would like to thank Ann Reeves for correcting the English, Anneke Breedveld for checking the Fulfulde words, Christian Smid and Hans de Visser for drawing the maps and figures, José da Veiga for providing literature from France, Bio Massi Soule for his continued assistance by correspondence, Theophile Djedjebi for providing up-to-date information and Jan Hijkoop and Rob Schnaar for checking the agricultural information.

Thanks also go to Ursul Schaap, Bart de Steenhuijsen Piters, Marcel Put, Johan van Dijk and Nassirou Bako for their constructive comments on parts of earlier drafts of the book.

At the University of Amsterdam I am indebted to the secretarial staff Lotty Jansen Saan and Saskia Peletier for their assistance and to my former colleagues Paul Quarles van Ufford, Fred Zaal, Anja Roelofs, Marcel Put, Johan van Dijk, Gonda de Haan, Jeanine Klaver and Maarten Bavinck for their continued interest in the progress of my work and the good times we shared.

I owe an enormous debt of gratitude to Josefien Bersee who commented on several versions of the manuscript and whose encouragement was invaluable. Marty Bax is thanked for her assistance in dealing with the final touches, Paul Hassing for sending me home from work 'until it is finished'! I must also thank my family and friends for helping me one way or another especially in the last phase of this project.

My final words of thanks go to my parents for their great help and everlasting confidence that one day this chosen assignment would be accomplished. To them I dedicate this book.
