ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Writing a PhD thesis is said to be a lonely and crisis ridden endeavour. The last four years have certainly been marked by all sorts of crises on institutional, health, and personal levels, but they have not been lonely. In fact, the end product, this book, is not a success I could claim for myself. It would never have been written without the substantial contribution of many others.

Even researchers need to eat. Therefore I am grateful for the generous financial support I have received in forms of work contracts, travel grants, fee reductions, and stipends from Prof. Anselm Haverkamp, the Brandenburgische Landesstiftung, the Heinrich-Böll Foundation, and the Amsterdam School of Cultural Analysis. Thank you to the staff of the Studienwerk of the Heinrich-Böll Foundation for their support beyond the monthly stipend and to Marlies Fiedler at the European University Viadrina.

Coming to Europe from New Zealand, I have encountered academics willing to give me a chance as a PhD candidate without previous knowledge: I am very grateful to Bettine Menke for believing in me and giving me a first institutional home in the Graduiertenkolleg "Repräsentation, Rhetorik, Wissen" at the European University Viadrina. Many thanks go also to all colleagues in that school. When I needed to find a new supervisor and institutional home another Professor gave me a chance without many questions. Mieke Bal has been a superb promoter, a brilliant teacher, and an extremely reliable source of personal support. I am deeply honoured to have been her student. Her mind child, the Amsterdam School of Cultural Analysis—specifically her theory seminar—has become an intellectual home for me. The other participants of her theory seminar have been a never ending resource of sharing diverse knowledge, teaching interdisciplinary methodology, analysing theoretical concepts and being supportive of each other's efforts. Thanks to all of you wonderful and intelligent people! In particular I want to mention Sudeep Dasgupta, Joyce Goggin, Catherine Lorde, Jaap Kooijman, and Yolande Jansen for their friendship and generous hospitality. Murat Aydemir deserves much gratitude for his friendship and never ending practical support with printing matters (and even bringing a late draft to Mieke's home, thanks buddy!). I also want to mention Eloë Kingma, managing director of ASCA, whose openness, organisational and personal support and wit I greatly appreciated over the years. Kees Ostendorf has helped me find my way through the Dutch bureaucratic forest with patience and friendliness.

Research in the field of gender and sexuality has one very rewarding side effect: the international network of academics who are willing to communicate in a non-hierarchical manner and who offer support and astute help quickly and generously. The following people around the globe have read various chapters of this book or publication drafts: Heather Cameron (Berlin/Germany), Corinna Genschel (Berlin/Germany), Joyce Goggin (Amsterdam/NL), Didi Hermann (Keele/GB), Alice Kuzniar (Chapel Hill/USA), Karen Nairn (Dunedin/New Zealand), Baden Offord (Lismore/Australia), Shane Phelan (New Mexico/USA), Katrina Roen (Wellington/New Zealand), Kiven Strohm (Amsterdam/NL/ Canada), Nigel Warner (London/UK), Volker Woltersdorf (Berlin/Germany), and Julie Wuthnow (Christchurch/New Zealand). Their comments have been invaluable and any failure on my part to mend what they identified as problematic is entirely my responsibility. I particularly want to express my gratitude to Baden Offord for his wonderful emotional and academic support—meeting you was the most timely rescue that could have happened. Daphne Hazelgrove (Christchurch/New Zealand) has proof-read the first two chapters. Sonja Neef

(ASCA/Cologne), Jaap Kooijman (ASCA/Amsterdam), and Murat Aydemir (ASCA/Amsterdam) have kindly translated the summary into Dutch. Lars Jochimsen produced the layout and Maik Heyne designed the cover—thanks for your generous donation of time and skill. Katrina Roen has edited the whole book with amazing patience, skill, and speed amidst her own busy schedule—Goddess and you know how many changes needed to be made right at the end—I hope I will be able to re-pay you one day.

In the course of the years I have been invited to attend conferences and give a number of lectures on three continents. A warm thank you to the organisers of those events for giving me these opportunities. I must particularly mention the organisers of the 1998 Conference on Gender, Sexuality, and Law in Keele, GB—specifically Carl Stychin—who not only gave me the first opportunity to air my thoughts internationally and awarded me a scholarship to attend, but created the opportunity to build the best academic network I could ever have wanted.

At the most decisive moment of this project—just before giving up—I got involved in the organisation of an international conference on queer theory and politics (Berlin, October 1998) and, consequently, in editing an anthology on the same topic (Questio 2000). Working fate bound us for years, friendship is its most cherished result. The benefits are immeasurable. Thank you for your continuous challenge of my thinking, your astute knowledge, your support, your wit, your anger and frustration, your cooking skills, and your libraries: Christiane Dietrich, Antke Engel, Corinna Genschel, Sabine Hark, and Eva Schäfer.

Besides academic support, my kind of research needed support of the activists I researched. I am deeply indebted to all my interviewees for their time and trust, particularly those I interviewed in the beginning, who had to teach me some of the most basic things. My research was supported immensely by activists around Europe who invited me to stay on their sofas, cooked dinners, picked me up from train stations, and took me out for breakfasts and dinners. I have seen Europe through their eyes! The extent of research initially necessary for this topic would not have been financeable nor comprehensible without your support: Barbara Grut and Sarah Aldington from EGALITE in Strassbourg, Kieran Burns from EGALITE in Brussels, Michiel Odijk and Jan Willem de Jong from RozeLinks in Utrecht, Kurt Krickler from HOSI WIEN in Vienna, Astrid Mattijsen from Utrecht, Nigel Warner from ILGA in London, and Maren Wuch from ILGA in Cologne. My colleagues on the executive board of ILGA-Europe have taught me a lot over the years about how to become a good activist in a transnational network, how to deal with transnational institutions, how to speak in front of politicians and parliamentarians and how to write, negotiate, moderate, fight, and knock on doors of officials at the European institutions. Thank you for becoming my admired friends, colleagues, and teachers: Adrian Coman, Isabelle Cruette, Tatjana Greif, Steffen Jensen, Kurt Krickler, Jackie Lewis, Alberto Volpato, and Nigel Warner.

A group of people have consented to endure me and my thesis—as the package deal—over the years and to calmly go through every crisis with me, never losing patience and always being there for me. My parents, Hubert and Marlis Beger-Hintzen, my brothers Holger Beger-Hintzen and Hanjörg Beger, my sister-in-law Barbara Beger-Hintzen as well as my nephews (Jonas and Severin) and my nieces (Judith and Felicitas) were looking out for me over the years. In particular I must mention Daniela Rieß-Beger, whom I cannot even begin to thank for her friendship, intellectual and emotional support, and hospitality during our weekly meetings in Berlin. I am grateful to the Karatekas at Seibukan, Berlin for supporting me to stay on the move and advance my Karate skills while my face started to look like a computer screen: Tobias Bock, Steffen Laurisch & Ines Zietlow, Fabian Rincic, and Maik Heyne.

Acknowledgements are a wonderful chance to express my love and gratitude to those friends who are my family: Heather Cameron, Angela Dechow, Antke Engel, Corinna Genschel, Al Hemsley, Maik Heyne, Lars Jochimsen, Anja Kofbinger, Alice Kuzniar, Jürgen Lillteicher, Esther Lopez, and Kaden Benjamin Thomas in Germany. Daphne Hazelgrove, Anne Lamont-Low & Eva Böhner & Georgie McCormick, Piotr Legutko, Karen Naim & Mac McDonald, Katie Nimmo, Baden Offord & Christopher McFarlane & John Ryan, Amanda Robertson & Jenny Lee, Katrina Roen & Sabrina Mazzoni, and Dorota Szymanska, for keeping in touch over the years, writing innumerable e-mails, listening to me on the phone, visiting me on the other side of the world, and providing me with places to stay and company for two Southern summers in Australia and New Zealand to work, give papers, recuperate, laugh and feel at home.

Last but not least I want to mention Kirstie Murdoch who has been extremely supportive on every level from the beginning. She made it financially and emotionally possible for me to start and keep working in spite of the refusal of stipends in the beginning and the loss of my institutional affiliation in the middle. I am looking forward to your reading this end product in friendship. It would not have been written without you. To my not so little dog son, Hanno Tui, who already survived the MA thesis, let himself be transported to Europe, and stoically went through everyday of the PhD with me, always happy, always loving. And to Melanie Keuthe, who rescued me out of the deepest ditch of this process and for whom I will begin to translate every word of this book into German even if it takes me years.
