Sex differences in anger expressions: the shaping role of social appraisals
Evers, C.A.J.M.

Citation for published version (APA):

General rights
It is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), other than for strictly personal, individual use, unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Disclaimer/Complaints regulations
If you believe that digital publication of certain material infringes any of your rights or (privacy) interests, please let the Library know, stating your reasons. In case of a legitimate complaint, the Library will make the material inaccessible and/or remove it from the website. Please Ask the Library: http://uba.uva.nl/en/contact, or a letter to: Library of the University of Amsterdam, Secretariat, Singel 425, 1012 WP Amsterdam, The Netherlands. You will be contacted as soon as possible.
Acknowledgments

A life without emotions would be extremely boring. The completion of my PhD project was paired with a mixture of different emotions, but the positive ones always ruled along the way. I am happy that I was able to investigate such an intriguing topic, and I want to express my gratitude to a number of people that have contributed to this project.

First, I could not have written this book without the help of my supervisors Agneta Fischer, Tony Manstead, and Patricia Rodriguez Mosquera. I would like to thank you for your inspiring help, encouragement, and for sharing your immense knowledge stored behind your cortices. All of you were important during different stages of my project, but I especially owe Agnet a a big thank you, for being the continuous factor in supervising and for your great support, scientifically and personally.

Many other people contributed in other ways. My roommates Willemijn, Sjoerd, and especially Clemens: You were the best roommates I could imagine. Besides our daily long and deep scientific conversations (?), it was always good fun with you. I want to thank you, as well as Kirsten (amai), Yael, Lotte, and Helma for your support, the incredible amounts of coffee with stroopwafels, the necessary distraction, and the chats about 'little cows and calves'. Further, I would like to thank my other colleagues of the Social Psychology department of the University of Amsterdam. All of you were great, and it was a pleasure to work in such a warm atmosphere and to be surrounded by so many social and exuberant people.

Further, my stay at Stanford University was extremely valuable for the completion of this project. I thank James Gross for having me at his well-organised lab with so many inspiring people. And Iris Mauss, thank you so much for sharing all your physiological knowledge with me and for your collaboration. I thank Richard for being my Stanford-buddy.

I would also like to thank some other people who have been important for me: Henk Nijman, for showing that I had to pursue a career in science; Angeline and Nicole for being my paranimsfen and for their warm friendship; Linda, for designing the cover, sharing an email-addiction, and being my friend; all my friends from 4LB and those once studying in Maastricht; Jacques, Beppie, Deb, and JJ for their interest; and my sister, brothers, and their significant others, because you are all special to me.
I definitely want to thank my parents for their belief in me, and especially my mother for her inexhaustible positive emotions and her gift to make everybody feel special.

The last words are for Martijn. Thank you Tijn, for your love and faith in me.

Catharine Evers
Amsterdam, January 2005