Acknowledgments

My original intention was to stay in the Netherlands for one rainy year, but somehow I stayed for seven. During this time I wrote one thesis. For this undertaking the support of the following people and institutions was essential.

I have benefited enormously from the academic guidance of my supervisor Arno Riedl. He was involved and enthusiastic as well as critical and instructive, and he provided me with the needed autonomy. Our many plans for future joint work manifest the success of our collaboration. Thanks.

I enjoyed trust and support of my promotor Arthur Schram who, in spite of the troubles that I generated, and for one glass of milk, accepted my solicitation to join CREED. For this, as well as for his detailed discussion and comments on my work, I am very thankful. I am much obliged also to Richard Boucherie for guiding my first academic steps and for approving my venture into social sciences.

Jos Theelen deserves a large credit for his experimental software. Karin Breen deserves it for helping with my many requests, and Elfie Bonke and Marian Duppen for helping us foreign students at the Tinbergen Institute to survive in an alien country. A large chapter of my thesis benefited from the comments by Martijn Egas. The generous financial support I received from the University of Amsterdam, the Bank of Slovenia, and the Marie Curie program of the European Commission, is gratefully acknowledged. The hospitality of Jordi Brandts and the Institut d'Anàlisi Econòmica made my stay in Barcelona both productive and enjoyable.

As a foreigner I relied on support of many old and new friends. I received especially much from Jens, Antoni and Maria. Each of them has been essential at various times, for preserving my personal as well as professional spirits.

A colorful social environment was regularly provided by Astrid and Ernesto at their appreciated diners, by Eva who also translated parts of my thesis into Dutch, by Matthijs, Nick, Ronald and others at CREED, by Ada, Ana, Ibolya, Klara, Louise, Marcos, Mauro, Miguel, Sebi, Silva, Silvia, Simonetta, Sunčica and others at the TI, and by Cecile, Cees, Henk, Jan, Manola, Maurice, Michel, Sebastiano and others at UvA. I have shared my residences in Amsterdam and Barcelona with a most peculiar collection of flat mates. The current pair, Mirko and Zoran, are credited with keeping my mind on Earth and with sustaining the constant inflow of entertaining issues and guests.

I most missed my grandparents and my social net back home in Slovenia. Through their frequent contacts and visits, Barbara, Dare, Dario, Darja, Jaka, Jana, Nana, Peter and Špela fortunately remind me that I never really left.

Finally, I am very fortunate for having such enlightened parents who support me intellectually, morally and materially. Moreover, I am proud to have the opportunity to pursue scientific challenges jointly with my incredible brother. They give me inspiration for my work.
